Avoid False Economy. The Well-Taxed Motorist. Encourage Big Industry. A Record Worth While.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE PEOPLE have money and will spend it, even for things not necessary to life, if you advertise with energy.

While some industrial presidents fill pages telling why business is bad and profits down, R. W. Woodruff, president of the Coca Cola Company, uses only 60 words in a report, telling stockholders that business is good, profits up, both exceeding all records.

Business men with sob stories to tell will observe that Mr. Woodruff's company has been advertising more energetically than ever.

SIMILARLY, George W. Hill, whose success as president of the American Tobacco Company, succeeding his father, has been phenomenal, makes his report of business and profits sound like his own radio song: "I'm lucky, this is my lucky day."

Only, of course, there is no luck about it.

Business and profits for his company continue to break records, and so do his advertising expenditures.

"If your business is not worth advertising, advertise it for sale."

To retrench on advertising in "hard times" is false economy.

THE AMERICAN Petroleum Institute shows that taxes paid by automobile owners are about three times as great as taxes paid by steam railroads. Railroad plans to soften automobile competition by heavier taxes or other burdens on automobiles cannot well succeed.

AUTOMOBILE TAXES, not counting cost of accident insurance, cost one thousand and sixty million dollars a year. Railroads, according to the institute, pay three hundred and fifty-six millions a year.

Railroads complain that motorists use public highways, while railroads must build their tracks. But motorists pay for practically all the good roads with their gasoline tax. With it they also pay in some states for schools, sea walls, fish hatcheries, oyster conservation and state buildings.

In spite of this, there are now pending in state legislatures 1,250 separate bills to tax or regulate motor owners.

It may be necessary for the country's 25,000,000 automobile owners to remind lawmakers that motor owners also vote.

ON THE OTHER hand, it is true that railroads, built in good faith, at gigantic expense, face great hardship. And extension of the canal systems and water freights will make conditions worse. The St. Lawrence Canal, when built, must cut deeply into the business of railroads serving the Middle West.

YOU CANNOT forbid a man to run his passenger car or truck on public roads, built with his tax money. FIFTEEN BILLIONS have been put into public roads and motor vehicles in America.

On the other hand the country cannot see railroads pushed to destruction. Real competition with automobiles might be supplied if railroads would adopt some principles of lightness, speed and fuel economy developed by the automobile industry, using non-stop rights of way on steel tracks, at high speed, reducing transportation costs, while increasing profits, offering speed and comfort beyond the reach of motorists on crowded highways. But railroading, like war, is a settled business, and will not easily be shaken out of its rut.

Some solution of the railroad problem should be found, before a crisis forces sudden action. There should be no obstacles to railroad economies, by wise mergers or fullest use of water freight facilities.

TO ENCOURAGE business, enabling it to employ men profitably and continuously, should be the work of government hereafter. Sufficient ingenuity has been developed to the task of holding business back, to the benefit of foreign competitors.

It is excellent news that the Federal Circut Court of Appeals has approved a merger of the Vacuum Oil Company with Standard Oil of New York, a natural combination, in furtherance of trade here and abroad.

A BRITISH-DUTCH company, headed by Sir Henri Deterding, one of the world's ablest business geniuses, operates in every corner of the United States, and all over the globe, as one solid, undivided organization. If we permit that, why in heaven's name forbid American business men to do the same.

While we depend on our present industrial system let us support and encourage it. Later, if we feel a tendency toward the Russian idea, we can take that up. But, halfway measures do not bring success.

THE GLORIOUS success of Capt. Campbell, driving his racing automobile on the Florida beach at 245 miles an hour, better than four miles a minute, should interest rich young sportsmen. There is a British record to go after worth while. Machine, driver and world record are all British.

Why waste time and money in silly sailing-boat races, of the "Shamrock" type?

A sailing race has no more meaning than a greyhound race, or a horse race, in these days. Any goose in white trousers can dawdle along with the wind. Going four miles a minute develops the science of building engines, as important now as building hulls for sailing vessels was 100 years ago.

FOOD BATTLE TAKEN TO COUNCIL

Firm Under Fire Insists It Is Pittsburgh Concern; Succop Asked About Tests

City Council today was to receive officially a letter from John D. Houston, of the James W. Houston Company, in which the company charges discrimination by City Director of Supplies Bertram L. Succop in awarding orders for canned goods used in city institutions.

In a letter sent to Council last week Houston charged that in many instances Succop awarded orders to the L. H. Parke Company—which, he said, is a Philadelphia concern—over lower bids made by Pittsburgh companies.

PARKE FIRM'S REPLY

W. P. M. Irwin, president of the L. H. Parke Co., today replied to allegations that the Parke company is a foreign concern. He pointed out that the Pittsburgh house of the company was started in 1902 and that various officers and employes of the company are residents of Pittsburgh and own their own residences here. He said the company owns its own warehouse on the North Side.

In addition to the original letter, a supplementary letter sent by Houston Saturday was to be considered. In this communication Houston asked Succop if the latter, during 1930, called for submission of canned goods samples by bidders, and requested a public demonstration in Council chambers of experts from Mayview who make selection of goods from samples, and asked if any state or private institution requests "Parke's or equal" when inviting bids.

MORE HIGH BIDS WIN

From city records it was learned that agricultural lime used at Mayview cost the city $11.75, although the Duncan Porter Company submitted a bid of $8.40. The award was given the Pittsburgh Plaster and Supply Company.

Frieda Hempel Balks At Subpena Service

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(INS.)—Frieda Hempel, noted singer, must appear in Supreme Court today to explain serving of a subpena. She was served with papers in an elevator when the subpena, it was claimed, was placed beside her on the floor. Mme. Hempel maintains this was faulty, while attorneys for her sister, Mrs. Helen Schapner, claimed otherwise.

Mrs. Schapner is suing her famous sister for the recovery of jewels which she alleged Mme. Hempel retained, although they were "only loaned."

SLAYER SUICIDE BY DYNAMITE

INDIANA, Pa., Feb. 9.—(AP.)—After killing his wife with a pick handle, Frank Verhovcek, 42, went to the cellar of their home at Coy, a mining village near Homer City, and killed himself with a charge of dynamite last night.

The coroner reported that Verhovcek met his wife on the porch when she returned from the home of a neighbor. He dragged her into the kitchen, where he crushed her skull with the pick handle. He then went to the cellar and set off the dynamite. The nouse was not greatly damaged by the explosion.

The killings were discovered when the village was shaken by the explosion. Two sons, Frank, 21, and Morton 20, were at the home of neighbors. A daughter, Mary, 17, is living at Cleveland, O. The coroner said domestic troubles were responsible for the killing and suicide.

Wales Barber for Neptune On Crossing Equator

S. S. OROPESA, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—The Prince of Wales had a great time this morning playing the role of barber in shipboard festivities attendant upon crossing the Equator as the Oropesa plowed southward en route from Balboa to Talara, Peru.

King Neptune, ruler of all the oceans, had radioed:

"To Our Royal Brothers, S. S. Oropesa: Will board you in first dog watch. Have all initiates ready."

He duly arrived at the ship's swimming pool and presided over the ceremonies, ably aided by his queen, who carried a gorgeous bouquet of cabbages and other vegetables.

The Prince of Wales was the barber, entitled "Scrape 'Em," and wearing a striped red and blue bathing suit with blue shorts and a yellow and green bathing cap. He wielded an enormous wooden razor and was assisted by his equerry, Maj. J. R. Aird, as the barber's mate, "Soap 'Em," and wore a monkey jacket and shorts.

'TRAFFIC TAG' GIRL LOSES BRACELET

Police Asked to Search For Jewels; Plumbing in Apartment Taken Apart

Josephine Bennett, the young woman who forgets about the traffic tags the police seem forever sliding under her windshield wiper, has lost her bracelet.

Miss Bennett said today it was a bracelet of 600 diamonds and worth $7,200. And that's all she had to say to reporters.

But city detectives reported that Miss Bennett had said she lost the jewel at a party she gave last night in her home in the Coronado apartments, Center and Aiken avenues.

Anyhow, it's missing and Miss Bennett has something other than traffic tags to worry her. In the last year she has made three personal appearances in Traffic Court to settled for anywhere from 16 to one parking tags.

SHOW HORSES, MEN BURNED

OAKLAND, Cal., Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Fire of mysterious origin destroyed the Oakland Horse Show early today, taking at least three human lives and incinerating between 47 and 80 blue-blooded animals trapped in their stalls.

Three other persons, including a woman, were missing, and may have perished.

Fire officials estimated loss in horses at $500,000.

John L. Thomas, 60, an employe of Carnation Farm stables, Pomona, Cal., was the only one of the three dead identified. The others were believed to be Michael McCarthy, also a Carnation stable employe, and a man known only as Murray.

While the fire was at its height and horses were plunging, snorting and dying in the flames, a woman was seen to dash into the blazing structure as if to rescue a favorite horse. Later a woman's purse containing 40 cents and a check were found in the ruins.

MAL DAUGHERTY GOES ON TRIAL

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, O., Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Mal S. Daugherty, former president of the closed Ohio State Bank, was called to trial today on the first of 16 indictments charging him with misapplication of funds.

Attorneys expected the first two days would be consumed in selecting a jury. Then the state will present 23 witnesses, including officials of the bank, business men and O. C. Gray, state superintendent of banks.

The indictment on which Daugherty was brought to trial alleges abstraction of $5,350 in bank funds, falsification of entries and misapplication of funds and credit with fraudulent intent.

Daugherty, a brother of former United States Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, was indicted by the Fayette County grand jury last October. The original indictments were quashed and new ones returned after Daugherty contended state investigators were present during the grand jury's inquiry into the closing of the bank.

Previously the defendant was declared bankrupt by the state. He listed his assets at $362,346 and liabilities at $642,933, but appraisers later estimated his assets at only $174,651.

BUTLER CASE END CHEERS CAPITAL

U. S. and Italian Officials Glad to Drop Incident; Marine General Rebuked

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—A sigh of relief almost loud enough to be heard in Rome went up from official Washington today over the abrupt abandonment of the court-martial of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, United States Marine Corps, for describing Premier Mussolini as a hit-and-run driver.

The matter has been allowed to drop with a letter from Gen. Butler that he regrets having caused "embarrassment to the government" and with a companion letter from Secretary of the Navy Adams condemning the general's "indiscretion."

RETURNS TO POST

Gen. Butler went back to his post at Quantico today with a wide grin on his face and rehoisted his commandant's flag of two stars which was pulled down a week ago when he was placed under military arrest.

All over the capital today the question was being asked:

"Who called off the trial?"

It promises to become almost as famous as the question of "Who killed cock robin?"

Officially, no one will admit instigating the negotiations which led to the abandonment of the trial. The official silence on this phase of the matter is deep and impenetrable, but unofficially, the credit for calling off what promised to be the most spectacular court-martial in the history of the Navy, is being given to the State Department and the Italian embassy, neither of which relished the prospect of seeing Gen Butler try to prove in open court that his observations anent the Italian dictator were true.

PUBLIC WITH BUTLER

There is small doubt that the state of public opinion was taken into account in the decision.

Hardships endured by American soldiers in France during the terrible winter of 1917-18 are related in Gen. John J. Pershing's memoirs today. HOUSE SLASHES NAVY'S FUND

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(INS.)—Proclaiming a rigid economy policy for the Navy, the House Appropriations Committee today reported the 1932 supply bill for the Navy after cuting it $36,310,691 under that of last year.

The program calls not only for the laying up of vessels and reduced operation of the fleet, but cuts the Navy's enlisted strength from 84,500 to 79,700 men and the Marine Corps from 18,000 to 17,500 men.

PRESIDENT CEMENTS TRUCE

Assurance of Sympathetic Administration of Fund Assures Democrat Support

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—President Hoover sent assurance to the Democrats today of a sympathetic administration of the $20,000,000 drought loan fund as this relief compromise was taken up by the Senate.

With this assurance, given in a letter to Senator Robinson, the minority leader, the Democratic chieftains put their shoulders behind the compromise at the start of the drive for Senate approval.

Meanwhile, Senate Republicans at a party conference determined to begin night sessions this week in a campaign to complete action on the appropriation bills before the March 4 adjournment to avoid an extra session.

AVERTS FIGHT

The President's letter saved a threatened break-up of the compromise agreement on relief, resulting from an unsolicited interpretation of the agreement by Secretary Hyde last Saturday. The secretary will administer the loan fund.

Considerable opposition to the compromise was in prospect from the ranks of the Senate coalition. In the House, Representative Parks (Dem.), Arkansas, declared his opposition to it.

The letter of President Hoover follows:

"My Dear Senator:

"As to our conversation this morning, I am glad to confirm at once that the proposed additional drought relief measure was suggested for the purpose of real aid to the weakened credit situation in the drought area and that in the administration of it, the secretary of agriculture assures me he has

Veteran Stricken in Jail, Freed, Dies in Home

Grover Barr, a veteran of the World War, who died Friday at the home of a sister from an illness contracted in the county jail, will be buried from the home of his brother, William Barr, in Filmore road, Forest Hills, tomorrow.

Barr on December 11 was sentenced to jail for 60 days because, Judge Thomas C. Jones explained today, he failed to comply with a court order to satisfy a $250 judgment against him and because he did not try to prove the insolvency which he claimed for himself. Judge Jones said he ordered Barr released last Tuesday when he heard the prisoner was ill.

The judgment was allowed against Barr in June, 1929, in a civil action. Previously Barr, whose automobile had collided with that of Axel Lund, had been charged with aggravated assault and battery, had paid $125 court costs and been discharged.

PINCHOT REFUSES TO COMPROMISE ON UTILITIES INQUIRY

'NO TRUCE,' GOVERNOR ASSERTS

Wants Representation for Public; Pittsburghers Guests of Executive

By E. W. PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 9.—Gov. Pinchot today flung out a new war cry against the utilities, refusing compromise and promising to show no quarter. In answer to the question, "Would you compromise on the Moore bill if the Senate cuts out the three members to be named by the Governor," he replied:

"I am heartily in favor of the consuming public being represented."

"There are two forms of proposed investigation, one to find out whether what the Governor said about the Public Service Commission is true; the other—a far more important question covered by the Moore resolution—whether the Public Service Commission has been giving the people a square deal. That is the big question and, so far as I'm concerned, I do not propose to let it be forgotten."

FIRST BILL TONIGHT

The Governor announced that his first administration bill, the election code, would be presented in both House and Senate tonight, that he would address the joint houses tomorrow and also give a state-wide unemployment relief report.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar J. Kaufmann, of Pittsburgh, and a group of Philadelphians including Jay Cooke, Mayor Harry A. Mackey and Dr. M. N. Northrup, secretary of labor and industry, were guests at luncheon in the executive mansion, where the Governor announced the Pittsburgh relief plan was discussed. The forester commented:

"The Pittsburgh plan is a very valuable contribution to unemployment relief."

MOORE BILL IN DOUBT

The Moore bill to be messaged to the Senate from the House tonight, is expected to go to committee, perhaps never to return the same. It is the administration bill providing a three-way inquisitorial committee to make an investigation of public utilities and the Public Service Commission.

Pinchot spokesman say there will be no attempt to get it immediate attention of the floor, since a two-thirds vote would be necessary to suspend the rule and make possible an immediate vote.

The anti-Pinchot forces, led by the Philadelphia War Board, are expected to push through the Earnest resolution No. 2, which provides that the Senate's Judiciary General Committee conduct the investigation into the public utilities.

FUNDS LACKING

The three other resolutions, as a result, doubtless will go to committees and repose there, perhaps until a revolutionary movement of size and intensity draws one out. The Earnest resolution No. 2 carries with it no appropriation, and is exclusively a Senate inquiry.

Other bills to be presented include the election reform bill, which Senator Frank J. Harris and Representative D. Glenn Moore will sponsor. Senator James G. Coyne's bill to increase the number of judges in Allegheny County from 14 to 16 is expected to get its second reading. It probably will be passed tomorrow.

WOMAN BRANDS TARIFF 'DOLE'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(INS.)—Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, former governor of Wyoming, today pictured President Hoover as "straining at a gnat where crying needs of the masses are concerned and swallowing a camel where there are in question the desires of the powerful moneyed interests."

She spoke before the Women's Democratic Club of Montgomery County at the Manor Club in nearby Maryland.

Taking exception to the administration's characterization of an appropriation to feed destitute persons as a "dole," she said the "excessive tariff grants" contained in the Hawley-Smoot tariff act "can just as legitimately be called a dole."

HOOVER HELPS RELIEF TRUCE

no other intention, and that he will interprete it fairly and sympathetically.

"Yours faithfully,
"HERBERT HOOVER."

COMPROMISE ASSAILED

Parks told the House the compromise was "a shame and a fraud," and that none of the money could be given "to feed the 500,000 people in the bread lines because the secretary of agriculture will have to have security for the loans."

The bread line in Arkansas, he said, was growing and the relief agreement would not help.

Early House action on Democratic Leader Robinson's proposal to set aside $5,000,000 of the $20,000,000 fund to aid co-operatives to be financed through the intermediate credit banks is to be sought by Chairman Haugen of the House Agriculture Committee. The measure is called for under the agreement reached by the Senate and House conferees on the Interior Department annual supply bill, to which the added loan fund is attached.

NOT BOUND BY TRUCE

Representative Parks notified his colleagues he would not be bound by the compromise and hoped Senators Borah, of Idaho, and La Follette, of Wisconsin, would carry on "their fight for humanity."

The Arkansan said if the Arkansas Legislature voted a $15,000,000 bond issue for relief purposes, it would be impossible to dispose of them because the people of the state could not repay them.

He said the administration had called on Harry Couch, of Little Rock, to aid in devising the compromise proposal and assailed this action.

SENATE PUSHES POWER FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—The Senate Judiciary Committee today set up a sub-committee to select an attorney to carry into the courts the Senate's contest with President Hoover over the right to office of Chairman Smith, of the power commission.

After once being confirmed, Smith's nomination was rejected by the Senate. President Hoover had refused the Senate's request to return to it that and the nominations of Claude L. Draper, of Wyoming, and Marcel Garsaud, of Louisiana, to be members of the commission. On the second consideration, Draper and Garsaud were reconfirmed.

The committee today designated its chairman, Senator Norris (Rep.) Nebraska, and Senators Steiwer (Rep.), Oregon, and Walsh (Dem.), Montana, to select the attorney who will take the unprecedented constitutional conflict between the two branches of the government to the courts.

HANNA WILLIAMS

His father, Otto H. Kahn, international financier and chairman of the Metropolitan Opera Company, announced that the couple was married January 26 on the family estate at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y.

Mr. Kahn gave his age as 23 and his bride as 20. It was his first marital adventure and her second. Her first marriage to Charles Kaley, a bandmaster, was annulled on June 30, 1927, in Chicago. She was 16 at the time. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Williams, of Taylor, Pa.

The news of the marriage was not disclosed until Billy Rose, theatrical manager, announced that Miss Williams had left the cast of "Sweet and Low," a current musical production in which she had been giving Broadway a "Cheerful Little Earful" as a starred performer. Otto H. Kahn gave his approval to the union, it was understood, only on the condition that she forsake her stage career.

BOLT ON BONUS FEARED IN SENATE

Parley Stsarted by G. O. P. To Head Off New Threat Of Extra Congress Session

By ARTHUR MACHTEN,
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Threats of a battle between the administration-controlled House and the coalition-controlled Senate over soldiers' bonus legislation gave leaders in both bodies concern today.

There were indications that the two branches are approaching a deadlock over the amount of money that should be paid to the World War veterans in their adjusted compensation certificates, with the House fighting for a smaller percentage than the Senate.

To head off such a deadlock in the last days of this Congress, many informal conferences between powers in the Senate and House have been held the past few days and more will be held this week, it was learned.

NO FULL PAYMENT

While it is generally agreed that Congress will not pass a bill calling for $3,500,000,000 or any amount approaching that sum, there are differences over how much the treasury can stand without rocking the financial world.

A virtual ultimatum is understood to have been sent to members of the House Ways and Means Committee by members of the Senate Finance Committee, that unless the House committee acts this week, the Senate group will do so.

The Ways and Means Committee will consider the cash payment bills on Wednesday, but it is doubted that a measure will be reported out that day.

Before the committee reports a bill, it is considered certain the Republican majority will submit it to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon for his comment. Informal conferences between Republican leaders and Treasury officials already have been started.

FAVOR 50 PER CENT PLAN

Democrats in the Senate and House were said to be in agreement for the Garner compromise plan. Representative John H. Garner, of Texas, Democratic House leader, said that the least he will accept is a bill increasing the loan value on the certificates from the present 22½ per cent to 50 per cent, with interest at 4 per cent.

His estimates are that this proposition would cost the Treasury about $1,000,000,000 in addition to the approximately $300,000,000 which already has been loaned to veterans. Garner bases this estimate on expectation that 75 per cent of the veterans would take advantage of the offer.

Republicans, however, are insisting upon a maximum outlay of from $300,000,000 to $500,000,000. They would accept the increase in the loan value but would put stipulations in the bill limiting the loans to veterans in distress or to limit the amount each veteran might borrow.

$12,000,000 Urged For Vets Hospitals

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—The House Veterans' Hospital Sub-committee today approved the Rogers bill to authorize $12,000,000 for hospital construction.

MARY CARR, SCREEN MOTHER . . . SHE FILES AS BANKRUPT

Mrs. Carr, internationally beloved movie mother, whose earnings supported six children and her semi-invalid husband until the talkies brought fewer and fewer calls for mother roles. Money grew scarce, bills mounted, now she's filed a petition in bankruptcy.

BUTLER'S TRIAL ABANDONED

Gen. Butler and criticising the administration's decision to put him on the legal spot for his remarks. The White House has received a bushel basket of them. Senators and Representatives have been deluged with them. Butler himself has received upwards of 2,000 letters, some of them containing money with which to prosecute his case. And in Washington, as elsewhere, the moving picture theaters have resounded to applause when Butler's face was thrown on the screen, with corresponding groans and hisses for Il Duce.

The Italian embassy has been peculiarly sensitive to this state of affairs, and it is significant that the decision to call off the trial was reached after Nobile Giacomo de Martino, the Italian ambassador, had a long and earnest conversation with Secretary of State Stimson.

AGAINST TRIAL

The ambassador is understood to have protested that neither he nor his government wished to see Gen. Butler put on trial. The personal feelings of Il Duce and the honor of the Italian government were completely assuaged by the formal apology which Secretary Stimson extended to the ambassador immediately after Gen. Butler admitted making the remarks attributed to him.

Friends of Gen. Butler, and, for that matter, a number of those not particularly friendly to him, have contended from the start that the court-martial was a mistake.

Secretary of the Navy Adams, his immediate chief, was one of those who believed that the Stimson apology and a reprimand to Butler himself was all that was necessary in the case. He was overruled by President Hoover and Secretary Stimson after the matter had been thoroughly canvassed at a cabinet meeting.

Later, when Gen. Butler retained a group of counsellors and began making plans for an elaborate defense, it began to dawn upon official Washington that perhaps the step had been a little too hasty.

EMBARRASSING SITUATION

Secretary Adams insisted that the court-martial be open to the public, which meant that upwards of 50 reporters were going to be at the ringside to report fully to the world this most remarkable case wherein an American general was going to try to prove that all the uncomplimentary things he had said about the head of a friendly foreign government were, in fact, true. It was a prospect that could not be relished from the standpoint of international peace and amity.

Consequently, an emissary of the administration approached Gen. Butler and discussed the desirability of calling the whole thing off. Being possessed of a sense of humor that has, on occasion, got him into "scads of trouble," the general consented.

His letter to Secretary Adams did not state that the charge which he made against Mussolini was untrue, nor did it contain any personal apology to Il Duce. Gen. Butler merely expressed regret at the embarrassment he had caused the government, and returned to his "Leather Necks" at Quantico, with a grin.

FILM 'MOTHER' BANKRUPT

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Mary Carr, veteran of the films, who often has been portrayed as the struggling mother of a brood of children, is playing another part now—this time stark realism.

She is the mother of six children, all dependent on her; the father, W. C. Carr, is a semi-invalid—the setting for a drama of real life.

For years the family went its way unworried by want.

Mary Carr had been on the legitimate stage. In 1909 she entered motion pictures.

She was cast as a mother, and had played that role regularly throughout her career. The one in which she scored probably her biggest success was "Over the Hill" (to the poor house).

Then came talking pictures. The type of story changed. There wasn't much call for mother parts. Mary didn't work often. Finally calls from studios stopped.

HALL SITE BILL GIVEN COUNCIL

Consent Ordinance Drafted; Vote on Measure Likely To Be Taken Next Week

A consent ordinance giving the County Commissioners permission to erect the town hall on the Nicola site in Oakland today was in the hands of President John S. Herron, of Council, who was prepared to submit it to his colleagues this afternoon.

Council is expected to vote on the ordinance next week, after turning it over to the finance committee.

The ordinance provides that the Commissioners shall provide for payment of any back taxes or claims on the site up to and including the year in which it is purchased.

Opponents of the Nicola site are hopeful that Council will defeat the ordinance.

Council had two communications today bearing on the site. A. Patrick Flood, manager of the East Liberty Chamber of Commerce, approved the site and a citizen, J. G. McConnell, of 1204 Fairdale street, objected to it, suggesting a downtown site.

Meanwhile Edward Townsend, an owner of Duquesne Garden, went ahead with his campaign to sell the Garden site for a Town Hall. In a letter to Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong, of the County Commissioners, he offered the Garden at a price of $5.50 per square foot. Previously Townsend representatives had indicated a price near $8 a square foot was wanted for the site.

The Mueller Company won the contract for supplying corporation plugs and valves at $9.84 and $7.32 a dozen, while the Hays Manufacturing Company lost on a bid of $9.66 and $7.20.

Malone Will Favor Goods of State

HARRISBURG, Feb. 9.—James F. Malone, secretary of property and supplies, today announced that he has issued orders to buy, when things were equal, Pennsylvania-made canned goods, Malone said:

"The state buys canned goods at the low price as long as the product meets the specification and tests. Quality is very often a question of opinion."

He issued his order after investigating state contracts following the Pittsburgh protest of the Houston Company. A considerable amount of New York and Maryland goods had been bought, he said.

Malone added that 32 per cent of the canned goods bought by the state during the current six months was from the Parke concern, and in the year previous, 40 per cent of the total amount. However, Pittsburgh dealers sold 19 per cent of the total to the state.

NEW TO TESTIFY IN LEASE QUIZ

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(INS.)—Former Postmaster General Harry S. New today wrote a letter to Senator Blaine (Rep.), of Wisconsin, chairman of the Senate committee investigating postoffice leases, requesting that he be called as a witness in the inquiry. Senator Blaine granted the request.

New's name was brought into the investigation last week while John J. Bartlett, former assistant postmaster general, was testifying to the leases made in St. Paul and a number of other cities. Bartlett said the leases were approved by New. The former cabinet member said:

"I want an opportunity to testify."

Coolidge Denies Lull Proves System Unsound

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 9.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

Few of us realize how vast and intricate the organization of modern life becomes. Most of it is private and voluntary, authorized, supervised and taxed by the government but without any official connection.

The most complete system is the government which furnishes public utilities, education, order and justice. The largest investments are in transportation. Great lines of communication cover the land and reach under the sea; the news services bring in hourly the important transactions all over the earth to be distributed with equal rapidity.

Calvin Coolidge

Merchandising is carried on by hundreds of thousands of small concerns but within a bond of interrelationship and many common sources of supply. Economic life has become organized into a wide system of production, distribution, marketing and consumption. Competition in all fields is apparent, yet the necessity for co-operation and co-ordination is steadily enlarged.

With life so complicated it is little wonder that from time to time through the dislocation of some part, the whole organism is thrown out of adjustment. Our economic depression does not prove our system unsound, but only indicates that we need more mental and moral power to keep all parts in harmonious relationship.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Toll of Week-End Accidents Reaches 14; Hit-and-Run Car Bowls Over Victim

Fourteen persons were injured by automobiles in the Pittsburgh district over the week-end. Five men were injured, at least one seriously, when a truck which had crashed into an automobile, careened and ran into them in the produce yards. Another man was the victim of a hit-run driver. His condition is critical.

The five men injured at the produce yards were standing under the Sixteenth Street Bridge when a truck owned by the Harry Wilson Transfer Company, and driven, police said, by his brother, George Wilson, 24, of 889 Saw Mill way, collided with an automobile, and careened into the group. Wilson was held over for further hearing under $2,000 bond.

Waxman was said to have suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries. The others were cut and bruised.

ALLAHABAD, India, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Mahatma Gandhi, leader of India's Nationalist millions, narrowly escaped serious injury Friday as he was traveling from Lucknow to Allahabad with the body of Pandit Motilal Nehru, which was being brought here for cremation.

Gandhi, Mrs. Nehru and others were traveling in a separate car from the body near Raebareli when their vehicle ran into a ditch and turned turtle. The occupants were jolted severely but were not injured and were able to continue their journey in another car.

The accident was disclosed only today.

Rearrest of Gandhi Not in British Plans

LONDON, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—William Wedgwood Benn, secretary for India, today told the House of Commons that the government had no intention of putting Mahatma Gandhi back in prison immediately.

He made his announcement in answer to a question as to whether he had made representations to the Indian government regarding the necessity for imprisoning Gandhi "to prevent repetition of his recent speeches and writings."

LAST OF 20 CASTAWAYS SAVED

7 Coast Guards, 3 Fishermen Taken to Safety After Boat Is Trapped in Jam

International News Service.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 9. Seven Coast Guardsmen and three fishermen, marooned in slushy pieces of floating ice in Lake Erie, were rescued today by the Coast Guard.

Three rescuing parties of Coast Guardsmen made a six-mile trek across smooth ice, pushing a heavy skiff, then covered a short gap of clear water between the ice shelf and the slushy floe to bring the 10 men to safety.

Seventeen other fishermen were rescued by the coast guard Sunday after they had spent 32 hours adrift on a floe in the ice field.

The imperiled men were huddled about an improvised canvas hut. They were rescued eight hours after an airplane sighted them.

As the plane flew over them the men used pike poles to write on the snow covered ice:

After the rescue of these 17, three remaining fishermen and the seven coast guardsmen were caught when the floe drifted a mile out into the lake.

These 10, when saved this morning, were brought to shore in good health, according to Surfman Irschel, who was among those stranded since last night.

SNOW ALLAYS DROUGHT

A snowfall of approximately two inches gave a picturesque touch to Pittsburgh and vicinity today. Shrubbery was draped with a heavy mantle of clinging snow, one of the heaviest downfalls of the winter season.

The snow was general throughout Western Pennsylvania, but in some of the nearby towns it was raining, particularly over the watersheds of the Monongahela and Cheat rivers. Fairmont, W. Va., reported three-fourths of an inch rain, the heaviest recorded in that district for months. Local Forecaster W. S. Brotzman today said the heavy snow and rain would aid materially in relieving drought conditions.

Following the snowstorm colder weather will prevail, but no decided drop in temperature is anticipated, it was said at the local weather bureau.

The State Highway Department had all men available working to cinder dangerous sections of the highways. Motoring was hazardous in the mountainous sections.

35,000 Men Clear N. Y. Streets of Snow

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(INS.)—Thirty-five thousand men, the largest number ever employed for such a task, today removed snow from New York's streets. An army of almost 28,000 men cleared the streets yesterday and about 7,000 were added to the force today.

It was estimated clearing of the streets of more than two inches of snow would cost the city in excess of $250,000. The men are paid 50 cents an hour.

McGill was released when he furnished a $1,000 bond for his appearance. The names and addresses of the dancers were taken and they were told to appear at the hearing.

According to McGill, the raiding officers did not produce a warrant.

Deception Needed In Knick-Knack Popularity

Religious Journal Opposes Rum Plan

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 9.—(AP.)—The plan of government liquor control advanced by Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, in his individual report as a member of the Wickersham Commission was criticized today by the Richmond Christian Advocate.

The editorial says there is no institution for dispensing liquor that is not a saloon, and concludes with the assertion that prohibition should not be abolished merely because it does not function perfectly. A retreat on prohibition, the paper said, would be a government surrender to the lawless element.

CANNON FACES SENATE QUIZ

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—The Senate Campaign Funds Committee has decided to inquire into the handling of Anti-Smith campaign funds in Virginia in 1928 by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Officials of three Virginia banks have been summoned to appear before the committee Wednesday afternoon to testify regarding the expenditure.

Bishop Cannon, exonerated Saturday of a series of unnamed charges by a committee of 12 elders of his church, testified before the Senate Lobby Committee last year that he received over $65,000 from E. C. Jameson, of New York, for use in the drive against Alfred E. Smith, Democratic presidential candidate.

Only about half of this amount was accounted for, however, the bishop walking out on the committee without informing it what was done with the remainder.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Pope Pius decided definitely today to make a brief radio speech direct to the people Thursday, when the Vatican City radio station is inaugurated.

He will speak in Latin and the announcer probably will follow with a translation in English, and perhaps other languages.

The formal address will also be in Latin.

The program has been definitely set for 4 to 6 p. m. local time (10 a. m. to 12 noon Pittsburgh time).

Amelia Earhart, Putnam 'Honeymoon' at Work

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—When Amelia Earhart, flier, and George Palmer Putnam, publisher and explorer, were married Saturday they announced they'd be at their respective business desks as usual today.

This is to report that, contrary to the frequent custom of distinguished honeymooners, they told the truth. At their desks they were.

Miss Earhart was most concerned about attending a meeting of the traffic committee of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, and she was only a few minutes late. She is traffic manager of the Ludington line, operating hourly planes between New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

Mr. Putnam carried on business as usual at the publishing house of Brewer and Warren. He and his bride, he said, had received no toy airplanes or parachutes as wedding gifts.

Miss Earhart—and telephone calls to her office still come for Miss Earhart and not for Mrs. Putnam—planned to go to Washington late today to be guest of honor at a dinner given by newspaper women.

DEDICATE HUGE FOSDICK CHURCH

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—The non-sectarian Riverside Church, pulpit of the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick and place of worship of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and his family, was dedicated yesterday with a warning by its pastor that civilization cannot be sustained without the message which the church of God is trying to convey.

A congregation of 2,400 persons filled the auditorium and galleries of the $4,000,000 Gothic edifice high above the Hudson beside Grant's Tomb and hundreds more heard the services by amplifiers in other rooms of the church or stood outside.

Among the 2,400 was Rockefeller, Jr., whose beneficence helped largely to build the church—the third congregation of Dr. Fosdick has occupied in the last nine years in an effort to obtain for him a place of worship ample for the throngs which seek to hear him.

Every Sunday since the church was opened for worship October 5, its auditorium, thrice as large as the one in the Park Avenue church from which the congregation moved, has been inadequate to hold the crowds.

DIES IN PLUNGE OF 13 FLOORS

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Mrs. Catherine C. O'Mara, 37, was killed when she jumped or fell from the bathroom window on the thirteenth floor of an apartment house in East Sixty-eighth street.

She was the wife of Martin A. O'Mara, former president of the Brockway Motor Truck Corporation, president of the Indiana Truck Corporation and a director of the Hibernia Trust Company.

With her husband, Mrs. O'Mara was attending a party in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. William McDaniels. Police were told Mrs. O'Mara locked herself in the bathroom. A short time later the building superintendent heard a crash and found the body.

Police learned that financial reverses suffered by her husband and the fact that her daughter might be deprived of luxuries to which she had been accustomed might have led Mrs. O'Mara to commit suicide.

The Choral Society of the Young Men and Women's Hebrew Association gave their first concert of the present season in their auditorium last night. Harvey Gaul appeared both as composer and conductor, establishing a high mark of excellence as both.

Mr. Lissfelt

The shortcomings of this choral body have by no means disappeared, but it is pleasant to note how sincerely these singers are beginning to work towards a good ensemble, and certainly no other choir sings with more concern for musical effects. There were many soloists chosen from the members, most of them rather uncertain about vocal production.

Harvey Gaul's three new choruses were decidedly an achievement. His "Joshua" was a little bit jazzy, and the soloist leaned somewhat towards Sophie Tucker's style. But the Palestinian Love Song, with its effective antiphonal singing between chorus and solo soprano, is one of the loveliest melodies from Mr. Gaul's pen. The Song of the Harvester Makers is a virtuoso piece for chorus, suggestive of Chassidic ceremonial music, but less melancholy in spirit.

Jacques Larner, a talented young Pittsburgh violinist, played solo pieces in very naive fashion. It would be wrong to encourage this youth to believe that he is in the virtuoso class, either temperamentally or technically.

Julia Katz played repressed accompaniments for the violinist and Mrs. Balter kept the chorus in line with her excellent rhythms.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

PUBLIC WARNING

In Protection of Those Who Seek Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN For Pain

See That a Grave Deception Is Not Practiced Against You

WE are informed that a rather cruel misrepresentation may be attempted in this district, by unscrupulous or ignorant persons, on those who seek Genuine Bayer Aspirin for pain.

Hence this published warning, printed in the public interest and in ours, to protect your family and yourself from its possible results.

Preparations of unstated origin, we are told—masquerading in packages as nearly alike to Bayer Aspirin packages as possible—are being offered to the public as being "just the same as Bayer Aspirin" or "like Bayer Aspirin," or "giving Bayer Aspirin results."

Watch Out and Take Care. Only genuine Bayer Aspirin can rightfully claim Bayer Aspirin results. Only Bayer Aspirin can fairly claim Bayer Aspirin's SAFETY to the heart. For only the makers of Bayer Aspirin know the laboratory tests it embodies.

Some of these imitations are patently spurious. Some may be vicious in their effects. One that we found in Brooklyn contained 50% of plain Talcum Powder! The maker of this spurious aspirin was sentenced to 3 years imprisonment by the New York Courts. The well-being of yourself and yours is at stake.

Remember that years ago doctors widely warned the public against "headache remedies" as dangerous to the heart. As heart depressants that were unsafe to take.

Then remember how genuine Bayer Aspirin came. And was acclaimed the world over by leading men of science as SAFE relief for pain, and prescribed without hesitancy by eminent physicians as a relief that did not harm the heart. That did not cause heart depression. That acted with amazing rapidity, yet left no bad "after-effects."

What folly, in light of those things then, to dose yourself with drugs of which you know nothing. Drugs often made primarily to sell at shoddy prices. Made to imitate. Made sometime solely to deceive. Don't gamble—KNOW. The health of yourself and those near to you is too precious for experiment.

Remember those things. Then when you ask for Genuine Bayer Aspirin, see that you get it. Don't be misled for another's profit. Do that, if you must, only with preparations you use externally and not with those you take internally. Only Genuine Bayer Aspirin gives Bayer Aspirin results. Every box of Bayer Aspirin has the cross shown below — so has every tablet. Hence it's easy to identify. Watch out and take care. Our interest in this does not matter. But yours does.

Does Not Harm The Heart

WOMEN TO FILL JOBS IN SOVIET

MOSCOW, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Hundreds of thousands of Russian women, who during 1930 played an increased role in the socialization of Soviet Russia, are to be enlisted as workers in a further effort to solve the union's serious labor shortage.

With thousands of jobs open and no takers, the government is completing plans to fill vacancies with women, providing nursery facilities for children, who will be brought up under the care of the state. Measures listed include opening of a great number of new nurseries, extension of the network of social dining rooms, construction of laundries and other enterprises which will free women from domestic work.

An estimate is made of 170,000 children to be cared for during 1931, as against 70,000 in 1930. An official report says that 300,000 women are members of trade unions and that "conditions make them economically equal to men."

CHIEF RESCUED FROM FIRE

Assistant Fire Chief Arthur Bennett, of East Pittsburgh, was overcome by smoke while he and Fire Chief Charles Stack were assisting 14 men and women from the burning rooming house of Joseph Klein, 311 Fall alley, East Pittsburgh, early today. The fire was discovered in the third floor of the house, a 10-room frame structure, at 3:40 a. m. All occupants reached the alley in safety, police said.

Damage was estimated at $3,500.

DIRIGIBLE CREW SCANS CANAL

ABOARD U. S. S. LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9.—(INS.)—The United States dirigible Los Angeles hummed in leisurely fashion over Panama waters today, cruising like a sightseeing visitor over the various points of the Canal Zone.

The ship cast off from the tender ship Patoka off Balboa at 8:15 a. m. Sunday after taking aboard 20,000 cubic feet of helium and provisions to last several days, but will probably return to the mast mooring by sundown today.

The naval maneuvers are scheduled to start February 15, leaving the dirigible personnel another week to perfect plans and become accustimed to new atmospheric conditions. Eight more planes arrived yesterday to participate in the maneuvers. The fleet vessels are riding at anchor on both ends of the "big ditch."

CARNEGIE JOB MEET FAILS

The meeting of the Allegheny County Unemployed Workers Council, scheduled for last night in the Masonic Hall, East Main and Broadway streets, Carnegie, failed to materialize because of failure to pay the rent for the hall demanded by officials.

Not more than a dozen persons had gathered in the foyer of the hall, in anticipation of the meeting. Leaders of the group were not in evidence.

Carnegie police had asked the aid of county detectives in handling the anticipated crowds. Two men were dispatched to the scene but no trouble developed. Police said before the meeting that they would not interfere as long as it was conducted in an orderly fashion, and no radical statements were made.

The demand of the hall officials that the rent be paid in advance, however, forestalled the meeting.

BOXER QUIZZED IN FOE'S DEATH

Mario Gornick, McKeesport welterweight, was to appear today before members of the homicide squad of city detectives to make a statement concerning a boxing bout with Robert Cranshaw, 20, Negro, of 1527 Webster avenue, during which Cranshaw received injuries which finally caused his death yesterday in the Passavant Hospital. Gornick's statement will be turned over to the coroner, pending an inquest.

Cranshaw suffered a fractured jaw in the bout in Moose Temple the night of January 30. The same night Cranshaw was removed to the hospital. Pneumonia developed, causing his death yesterday.

IRON HAUL RATE DECISION NEAR

Iron and steel manufacturers of the Pittsburgh district this week expect to receive the decision on the high freight rates imposed last May 20 on short-haul iron and steel shipments. John G. Hopwood, secretary of the Public Service Commission, stated that that body is likely to hand down its decision after its executive session Tuesday or Wednesday.

At hearings here last summer, shippers testified that the new freight rates which increased the toll on Pittsburgh business would be too great a burden to put on consumers in the face of stiff competition from other districts.

Things I Never Knew Till Now
(But which you knew all along!)

That dunking doughnuts in tea is ever so much better.

That Ferenc Molnar's real tag is Ferenc Neuman—a lahntzman!

That a street car was actually stolen from a New York car barn many years ago—and no one has ever traced it!

That the city's policemen have to pay for their service revolvers, and for every bullet they shoot at you!

That there frequently is as much as 10 degrees difference in temperature between the New York and Jersey sides of the Hudson.

That if you have that kind of a heart, you can walk up the Woolworth Building in 15 minutes, 1,320 steps.

That the earth moves in three different directions at once.

That a Virginia ham tastes better if you eat it a year after it is baked, and that Southern folks eat fruit cake two years after baking.

That Arctic explorers sleep in snow houses with the doors open, the snow and the heat of their bodies keeping them warm.

That it is a scientific fact that more members of Arctic expeditions have died of overeating and overheating than of starvation and cold. Sir Hubert Wilkins is the authority, if you please.

That there are at least 60 stars to every man, woman and child on the earth. (Oh, you skeptics!)

That it takes six weeks to give one of the better and larger ocean liners a spring cleaning. (Having fun?)

That hard work never affects the health adversely so long as it is not accompanied by worry, anxiety or aggravation.

That in the Canadian census natives have to tell (this year) how many cats, doggies, bees, etc., they have.

That the world's wealthiest man is said to be the Indian prince, the Nizam of Hyderbad, listed as having 300,000,000 pounds. This includes jewels and gold and property.

That under Louis XIV one dared not speak; under Louis XV one spoke low; under Louis XVI one spoke loud.

That a diamond and a piece of charcoal are essentially of the same material. (Oh, all right. You write some, then!)

That it has been estimated that if a whale 90 feet long be struck on the tail by a harpoon two seconds will elapse before the blow will be communicated to the brain and ditto before the tail strikes back at the tormentors.

That much to his regret, Darwin found that his devotion to scientific research killed all his natural love for music and poetry.

That in 46 B. C. the calendar was changed to 15 months.

That bodies of persons poisoned with arsenic are in death preserved by the very thing that caused their death.

That one drop of vinegar will destroy a whole cask of honey.

That Bulwer is adored by the braggarts because he said if a hen would hold her tongue nobody would know she had laid an egg.

That the island on which Robinson Crusoe and his man Friday were stuck is now inhabited by 298 persons.

That Browning wrote in more than 100 different meters.

That Hayes is the only United States President who promised (when he was a candidate for the office) not to be a candidate again and kept his word. (What the deuce was his first name, again?)

That Steele won his election to the House of Commons by kissing the voters' wives with money in his mouth.

That when someone alluded to the great pleasure Napoleon must feel in receiving public applause, he said:
"Bah! the people would crowd about me just as eagerly if I were going to the scaffold."

That when Walt Whitman was asked if he thought Shakespeare as great a poet as himself, he replied that he had never been able to make up his mind. (These W. W's are all alike, wot?)

That Kant was so punctual, when he opened his door to go for a walk, the people of the neighborhood knew it was exactly half-past four, and would set their timepieces accordingly.

That Scott always answered every letter the day he received it. It's easy when you haven't a column.

That there is one person left in New York who calls pictures "pict—yures." Miss Janet Reade of the "Ballyhoo" show.

That the recent exposure here of the Wall Street firms and others who contribute coin to the Red X and then make employes pay for the donation, has made the column more enemies, but, oh, the friends!

And that the newest and most affectionate last line now used by letter-writers, goes like this:
"Yours until Bill Robinson misses a tap!"

FILM REVIEWS, NOTES ABOUT STAGE, HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM CHAT

Baseball Diamond Seen As Source of Film Celebrities

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 9.

Almost everyone knows that Adolph Zukor was in the fur business and that Samuel Goldwyn was a glove manufacturer, but professional baseball has never been properly recognized as a source of film celebrities.

Joe E. Brown, for instance, once was sub second baseman for the New York Yankees. Another comedy star, Buster Keaton, spent a part of his varied career as a shortstop for Muskegon.

Joe E. Brown.

Even more directors than actors were recruited from the national game. Ben Stoloff, of Fox, played shortstop for Portland, while both Al Green and Eddie Cline were pitchers for semi-professional teams. Fred Newmeyer, who used to work for Harold Lloyd, also was a pitcher.

Now a well-known character actor, Mike Donlin once played for the Giants, and was ranked among the leading players in the history of the sport.

It is one of Buster Keaton's hobbies to surround himself with baseball players. Byron Houck, his cameraman, was with the Philadelphia Athletics when they were world champions, and Vic Orsatti, his assistant director, was under contract to the St. Louis Cardinals.

LATEST GOSSIP

Edward G. Robinson has received official recognition of his portrayal of the gangster in "Little Caesar." This week a Hollywood bootlegger offered to take him down and meet some of the boys. Robinson hastily refused. A slip of the typewriter made me write that Frances Lee and Harry Harris, formerly a member of Paul Whiteman's Rhythm Boys, were keeping company. It should have been Frances McCoy. Incidentally, Harris wrote the current song hit "I Surrender." . . . After Ruth Chatterton and William Powell went over to Warners, Paramount barred the agent who engineered the deal off the lot. The ban is lifted now, and everything is forgiven—maybe. . . . Out at Mero-Goldwyn-Mayer, the commissary menu blossomed out with a new "William Haines Sandwich." . . . Hoot Gibson returns here from his vaudeville tour on the 25th and will start a series of westerns for Liberty productions. His old director, "Breezy" Eason, will be at the megaphone again. . . . Two days after James Hall was made honorary battalion chief of the Los Angeles fire department, flames broke out in his own home.

Hoot Gibson.

AFRICA, HERE WE COME

Now that M. G. M.'s "Trader Horn" has developed into a smash hit, all the other studios are turning their eyes toward the Dark Continent.

Jack Warner returned from the East with 200,000 feet of African film shot by Wynant D. Hubbard, a member of the National Geographic Society. Instead of tying the scenes up with a story, as was done so successfully in "Trader Horn," Warners will cut the film into 12 short subjects to be released under the title of "Adventures in Africa."

Incidentally, M. G. M. is said to be considering the release of Director Van Dyke's thousands of feet of left-overs from "Trader Horn" as an educational feature.

According to Ernest B. Shoedsack, who worked on "Chang" for Paramount, and who has just returned from Sumatra with "Rango," the brilliant sun at the equator is very poor in photographic value. Time exposures are often required, he says, to get the proper lighting.

Coming

NORTHLAND ROMANCE AND NICK LUCAS IN DAVIS

By GEORGE SEIBEL

With Nick Lucas in person, crooning some of the songs he has made famous as they have made him famous, the current bill of vaudeville at the Davis held up the interest in the new policy. Lucas has a way of reaching the hearts of his hearers through their ears which many a grand opera star would envy. He isn't classic, he doesn't go in for arias of noble proportions, but he pleases without becoming insipid.

George Seibel.

There are other good features on the vaudeville program with Lucas. Bobby Pincus is very funny, and has a capable partner in Isabelle Dwan. West and McGinty supply grotesque antics that loosen avalanches of laughter. And the dancers are up to expectations.

HEROES OF NORTHWEST

The screen feature tells a story written by James Oliver Curwood. "Rivers End" deals with the Canadian Mounted Police, who "always get their man." One of these sleuths of the snow starts out to get his, and in this case both hunter and hunted are played by the same actor—Charles Bickford, first known to fame in "Anna Christie."

It turns out that the hunted man is innocent, and the hunter is the villain. So when the victim returns and the pursuer has lost his life, all seems to end well.

FINE BACKGROUND

One of the best things about this picture is the fine setting—giving a true picture of the Northwest. "Rivers End" is scenically one of the most satisfactory films of recent vintage.

Bickford and Knapp also have the knack of making romance seem real. Perhaps it's the great outdoors that makes them seem fresh and human. Here is a Curwood story told in pictures without spoiling it.

NEW YORK CENSORS FROWN ON FILM GUNS

New York's State Censor Board is frowning on things gunmanlike and racketeerish. It's getting even tougher than Chicago's pink specialists. In New York they're beginning to edit out all machine-gun sequences, even in comedy.

First to get the censor board's application of the Sullivan law was Educational. In a short subject burlesquing guns and making fun of stick-up men, Educational was ordered to remove its reference to machine guns.

Robert Montgomery Is Sailor in Movie

For the next two weeks Robert Montgomery is going to know how it is to be a sailor in the Navy. Playing the featured role in "Shipmates," Montgomery is working with a movie company aboard the U. S. S. Colorado, anchored with the Pacific battle fleet in San Pedro harbor. Because of the ship's routine, the company starts work promptly at 7 a. m.

Plan Original Film For German Actress

"Cobra" will not be made with Marlene Dietrich in the lead. Von Sternberg is on an original story for the German star and will direct it when she returns from Europe April 15. Miss Dietrich is bringing her daughter back with her.

Louise Dresser Cast In Western Talkie

Irene Rich Portrays Mother in Picture

Irene Rich will play the mother in "Five and Ten," a screen dramatization of Fannie Hurst's novel. The new film will shortly go into production at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, under Jack Conway's direction.

Mrs. Lloyd Home, Wee Babe Thrives

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 9.—(INS.)—Although his mother, Mrs. Mildred Lloyd, has left him at the hospital to return to the family residence, Harold Lloyd, Jr., three-pound incubator baby, today was reported to be improving steadily. Mrs. Lloyd has left the hospital for the first time since the child's birth. The infant is being fed twice the amount of nourishment he received during the first week of his life, doctors reported.

Ex-Wife in Havana, Tom Mix Flies Away

HAVANA, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Tom Mix has gone as fast as possible away from Havana, resulting in the cancellation of elaborate entertainments planned for him. His divorced wife arrived. He took an airplane to Miami.

LA CRAWFORD BEGINS WORK IN 'TORCH SONG'

After a six weeks leave of absence, Joan Crawford returned to the studio, and began work on her new starring film, "The Torch Song."

Harry Beaumont, who directed Miss Crawford in "Our Dancing Daughters" and "Our Blushing Brides," will direct her in the new film, which is an adaptation of Kenyon Nicholson's stage success of the same name.

Among players selected to support Miss Crawford are Neil Hamilton, John Mack Brown, Marjorie Rambeau, George Marion, Norman Phillips, Gertrude Short, Clara Blandick, and George Cooper. Additional dialogue was written by Martin Flavin and continuity by Bess Meredyth.

UKULELE IKE IS GIVEN NEW FILM CONTRACT

Cliff Edwards, better-known as Ukelele Ike, has been signed to a new long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. At the same time it was announced that Edwards, who first made his reputation as a singing, uke-strumming comedian in the Ziegfeld Follies, will play a part in "Shipmates," a forthcoming picture, featuring Robert Montgomery.

At the present time, Edwards is playing in an M-G-M comedy, "Stepping Out," with Reginald Denny, Charlotte Greenwood and Lillian Bond. "Stepping Out" is being directed by Chuck Riesner.

On Way

ACTRESS FROM SPAIN IN OLD HOME LOCALE

Conchita Montenegro came all the way from San Cebastian, Spain, to Hollywood to make her debut in pictures and when she got there she found herself back in San Sebastian again.

At least, as far as locale was concerned, the lustrous-eyed Spanish beauty was again in her home town when she played the part of the dancer in "Strangers May Kiss," Norma Shearer's starring vehicle.

In the picturization of the new Ursula Parrott novel, much of the action takes place in a luxurious estate in San Sebastian, Spain. It is in this sequence that Miss Montenegro appears.

Although she has played opposite Ramon Novarro in foreign version pictures, this is the Spanish girl's first role in English-speaking films.

George Fitzmaurice is directing the Shearer feature with Robert Montgomery and Neil Hamilton sharing leading man honors. Included in the cast are Marjorie Rambeau, Irene Rich and Jed Prouty.

Eva Le Gallienne Plans Long Holiday

Eva Le Gallienne announces that at the end of this, her fifth season at the Civic Repertory Theater, New York, she will take a year's holiday. The present season will terminate on May 16.

MR. HORTON IS BUTLER AND GENTLEMAN IN HARRIS

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Edward Everett Horton gives an amusing portrayal of a butler who masquerades as a gentleman in the film, "Once a Gentleman," which opened Saturday in the Harris. The picture is a comedy—a fair comedy, though its story is incredulous.

A rich man bedecks his butler with all the things a well-dressed man should wear, gives him 10 $100 bills and sends him on a vacation. Then comes a mistaken identity angle. The butler is taken to be an aristocratic colonel from India. He gains entre into an exclusive club and becomes the house guest of a wealthy gentleman.

GOES OVER BIG

He doesn't know anything about India, but he reads "Mother India." And he is a specialist when it comes to mixing fancy drinks. So he goes over big as a gentleman and a scholar.

But he begins to dream and his dreams get ahead of him. The big limousine, diamond ring and mansion on the Riviera turn out bubbles. But his dream of love comes true. The woman of his heart is only a housekeeper. And she's his when he goes back to his job of butlering.

BUSHMAN IN CAST

The supporting cast includes Lois Wilson, George Fawcett, Francis X. Bushman, Sr., and King Baggot.

Vaudeville is on the stage. Hanlon Brothers do some pantomime cleverly. Farnell, as a "stew," shows talent—and vulgarity. His rotund partner also needs more clothes about the shoulders. Jules and Josie Walton, with a couple other fellows, have an entertaining song and dance display. Other performers are on the bill.

Physicians are prescribing ACIDINE. Thousands of people have found it the only relief from acid indigestion and dyspepsia, gas, pain, heartburn, coated tongue, bad taste, dizziness, fullness, short breath and other troubles from acid stomach. Pain goes like a flash.

RADIO PROGRAM CHANGES UNJUST

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—One by one the great world figures of the day are led to the microphone. Their voices have been heard, in several cases have become familiar, to the people of the entire civilized globe—all within the last fifteen months.

The Pope comes now to join the stately procession, begun in the Fall of 1929 by Ramsay MacDonald and including at the last concentrated ear-cupping Benito Mussolini. Only Wilhelm Hohenzollern and Von Hindenburg remain outside the broadcasting corral, and we have a feeling they are getting ready to obey the radio beckoning, that both of them will be heard before Big Ben and the jazz boys usher in another year.

* * *

Certainly, Columbia's European representative, the industrious Cesar Searchinger may be depended upon to lay a seige at Doorn and Potsdam until he has obtained a clear and unmistakable "ja" to his requests.

The busiest man in Europe at present is Searchinger. With zeal and courage and diplomatic tact he travels about the Continent seeking the voices of European big shots for American eardrums. He has not missed many. So successful has he been that the M. Aylesworth, generalissimo of the N. B. C., in his annual report, strongly urges a foreign representative as a means of simplifying his problem of international broadcasts.

* * *

Meanwhile, to the Pope will fall the glory of winning the large hookup, which, of course, means the largest audience yet accorded a radio speaker. His voice will penetrate to every part of the world and people everywhere will take part in the latest spectacular conquest of the microphone. Tradition will be literally knocked skyhigh and a vast and vivid precedent will be established.

* * *

Doubt prevailed for several days last week as to whether the Pope would speak. Only one major network in America had announced the possibility. Were our most reliable spies on the job in Rome they would probably learn that the Pope held back his microphonic consent until he was assured that every broadcasting facility in America would be utilized for his radio talk. At any event, no definite word that he would speak was forthcoming until simultaneous announcements were issued by both networks.

* * *

Not since King George opened the London naval parley more than a year ago have the 150 odd stations of both American networks been available to a European speaker. The Prince of Wales, Mussolini, Shaw, Einstein, Sir Oliver Lodge—all had to be content with the audience of one network.

* * *

Slang, Dr. Frank Vizetelly says, is pronounced according to the personality of the individual who makes use of it. For example, the radio critic lists the following words and phrases, which were used by the people of the underworld before they became popular:

Fall guy, raspberry, phoney, wisecrack, on the spot, up the river, sparkler, easy mark, third degree, dead ringer, knockout drops, moniker, bump off, come-on game, a goner, false alarm, stand pat, sucker list, suds, rattler, panhandler, K. O., pinched, deadhead, daffy, main squeeze, and pen.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

We know of no worse evil in the radio world today than the tendency of individual stations and the networks to disregard program details and schedules that they themselves release for publication in the newspapers.

Cancellation of Hank Simmons' "Show Boat" Saturday night for the Minneapolis Symphony was a bold maneuver by Columbia that no doubt will bring them thousands of protests. It made little difference with us, liking symphonies as we do, but it was rank injustice to those who sat in armchairs expecting to hear "East Lynn."

The "Varieties" program earlier that night scheduled "The King's Horses" and other popular selections. Their batting average was almost zero with only one number being played as scheduled.

If you wish to co-operate with us in breaking up this practice sit down tonight and address your letter to the places it will do the most good—

Merlin H. Aylesworth, President, National Broadcasting Company, 711 Fifth avenue, New York.

William S. Paley, President, Columbia Broadcasting System, 485 Madison avenue, New York.

Simply state the facts as you have found them.

Personally we would like to know what is wrong that big companies like National Broadcasting and Columbia System cannot compel artists and orchestra leaders to follow programs in detail as released to newspapers.

Also—

If we kept a friend waiting 15 minutes for a scheduled luncheon we certainly would apologize for being late.

Are the networks too big to apologize for not showing up at all for appointments they have made with the listener?

* * *

Help us, help the networks, help yourself, help radio in general by writing that letter tonight.

OLD HORSE LAUGH

Tom Noonan, speaking in almost a whisper, said that he had been "kicked in the shins and was hors de combat with a bad cold."

The astute Henry Burbig listening in, wired him immediately:

"Tom, I never knew a mule could kick you in the shins and make you a little hoarse. Ha! Ha!"

* * *

Another listener then telephoned that he had been kicked by the same horse. And we add: "Ditto."

* * *

Tom said he thought all the stogies in the world were made in Pittsburgh until he received a telegram last week from a stogie makers' union in Wheeling. Watch your smoke, Tom!

* * *

QUESTION A DAY:

I have a phonograph record with voices very much similar to the "Three Bakers" on Monday night. Do they make records?—Elizabeth T., Oakland.

Answer—Not as a trio, but they have furnished the vocal background for Wayne King recordings.

LAWYER KILLS SELF IN HOME

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Frederick H. Warner, 52, an attorney, was found dead in his room yesterday by a maid who had gone to call him to lunch. He had been shot through the head. Coroner J. H. Sheele said the man apparently had committed suicide.

Warner was a member of the firm of Warner, Sterner and Seiff. He was a bachelor and lived with his 82-year-old mother in the Yeadon section of the city. She said she did not hear the shot and could give no reason for her son's death. A few hours before, she said, he had been in good spirits.

J. Edward Seiff, member of the law firm, also was unable to give a reason for Warner's act. He said:

"His health was good, and he was in excellent financial condition. He must have shot himself in a moment of mental collapse."

HOLDUP FOILED, 2 MEN KILLED

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(AP)—A thwarted bandit and one of his intended victims died as the result of a holdup which turned into a battle royal in the office of the International Baking Company.

Jose Prado and Emanuel Sena entered the bakery, police said, and attempted to rob its three owners and three other men. The victims laid down a barrage of chairs, tables, shovels, tongs and bags of flour while the bandits emptied their pistols.

Police came on the run to find both robbers unconscious and four of the bakery men wounded. Prado and Anthoney Carriera, one of the owners, died.

Ex-National Bank Examiner Held As Bandit

FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Frank Wood, alias Frank Nichols, one of two men arrested after an attempt to rob the Holliston Savings Bank Saturday, admitted, police said, that he was Frank F. Wood, a former national bank examiner.

Wood, who for many years was the highly respected cashier of the Mattapan National Bank in Mattapan, Mass., was arrested in Millis with Joseph Kosak, 19, of Boston, an hour after two men answering their description had attempted to rob the bank in Holliston.

After questioning, police said Wood admitted participation in the attempted robbery, frustrated by the bank treasurer and a young woman employe who sounded a burglar alarm.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

"FIDDLING" WHILE ROME BURNS

THEY say Nero "fiddled" while Rome burned. Probably just to show what a callous monster he was. Nero denied the story. Said he was out helping the firemen.

Really, it is difficult to believe that any human being could view such a frightful tragedy without emotion.

But the unhuman Robot can and does "fiddle" while the Art of Music starves — a human disaster of far greater consequence than the burning of Rome.

A Pittsburgh Institution

THE PARKE business was started January 1, 1889, by Mr. L. H. Parke and W. P. M. Irwin and shortly after Mr. Samuel F. Irwin and John M. Irwin became partners in the business. The corporation of L. H. Parke Company was incorporated with a Pennsylvania charter. The Pittsburgh house of the company was started about 1902, Mr. S. Clement Irwin being then a resident of Pittsburgh and Mr. John M. Irwin, vice president, soon followed and has been a resident ever since. Later Mr. Dudley G. Irwin also became a resident of Pittsburgh. All three own their residences and, of course are tax-payers.

The company had been located on Grant street for years but on the widening of this street it was necessary to secure a new home for the business and they bought the modern building located at Madison ave. and North ave., Northside, and own it clear, so the company is also a taxpayer.

Our salesmen and employees are residents of Pittsburgh and many of them own their homes and are interested in the company as stockholders. As employees, they have been given this opportunity at different periods. So much for the personnel of the L. H. Parke Company.

The president of the company has been connected with similar businesses for over fifty years and when starting the original partnership decided that the only method by which we could develop a permanent business was by the handling of quality merchandise, good service and giving buyers exactly what they bought. We were in close touch with our tea buyers in the growing countries. Our president went to the South American countries to form reliable connections on coffee importations and gather other information that he deemed necessary for the intelligent pursuit of the business which now had extended in many states. We also have a most complete spice mill and turn out thousands of tons of pure, freshly ground spice. Our canned foods are selected with the same care as all our other merchandise and are packed to order according to our own specifications. The department is in charge of Director Mr. Frank Rogers, Philadelphia, assisted by Mr. Robert Major, Pittsburgh. When these two gentlemen get through with their inspection and approve we are quite sure that the original traditions of the company are upheld in every respect: Quality first, last, always. Next in importance is to see that the cans are filled to the brim. Thousands of buyers in thirty-two states have convinced themselves that this is the most economical method.

We also manufacture flavoring extracts of the finest quality, including the popular flavoring vanilla made from selected beans and varieties to meet the views of various classes of trade. In fact, we have yet to see any equal of our extra strength vanilla, lemon and orange.

We do want to take this opportunity to thank the newspapers of Pittsburgh for the courtesies extended.

Alma Rubens Turned Tables on Stage Boss, Won Chance in Films

Fired After Struggle in Room, Friendly 'Prop' Saved Her Job

By ALMA RUBENS.

CHAPTER IX.

"Tony's" approach was a masterpiece of subtle, male dexterity. He knew that I was out of luck so far as the others of the company were concerned because I would tolerate no affairs; He knew that I was already disgusted with the road.

The late hours and the terrible jumps had me almost frantic. Frequently we would get off the train at 5 in the morning. Not yet daylight. Four or five hours' sleep at the most. And it seemed to me it was always raining.

Then getting settled in our hotel. Unpacking our baggage. A snack of breakfast and then we would have to hurry to the theater to rehearse. Only the principals had dressing rooms in some of those sorry small town theaters.

If I was late to rehearsal I would get a terrible reprimand. Some of the assistants had the vocabulary of the proverbial deep sea sailor. And how they could use it, especially on the girls.

Miss Rubens

ALMA RUBENS
"HE . . . . INTOLERABLE"

Often in Tears

It seemed to me that I was in tears about half the time. The other half I spent washing and powdering them away.

My father and mother had seldom scolded me, and only once that I can remember was I ever spanked. That occurred one day when I was about 12, when my mother had gone out to work some place, leaving me with father, who was barely able to walk around.

I did something that he didn't like and he rebuked me. I became fresh and made some nasty remark. He lost his temper, the only occasion upon which I ever saw this happen.

He seized me, threw me across his knee, and spanked me lightly once or twice.

I screamed blue murder!

"Oh, you brute!" I cried. "Father. You're beating me. You're beating me. You're killing me!"

Then I fainted. With one eye open.

Father was terribly upset. Tears were rolling from his eyes. He hobbled up and down the room in the most pathetic manner. Every few turns he would stop and feel if my heart was beating. I tried to make it stand still.

"Oh, by golly, I've killed her," he moaned. "Oh, why did I do it? And I was only fooling, too. Ach! My poor, poor, baby."

I stood it as long as I could. His suffering was unbearable and I was so ashamed of myself, I didn't know what to do. Cagily, I moved an arm. Then a leg. He ran up to me and I sat up.

"Baby! You're all right!" he cried gleefully. "Baby, I'm so glad. I'll never strike you again. By golly, it is a promise. I'll buy you anything you want if you won't tell mamma I struck you."

This last was more than I had bargained for. I must have been a little mercenary, because I took him at his word.

"Will you buy me that gold tooth?" I quickly asked him before he could change his mind. The tooth in question was a needed replacement for one which a quack dentist had pulled through an error. My mother had insisted on having a porcelain one put in, but I had held out for a gold one.

Anyhow, father promised me the gold tooth; he kept his word, and I did not mention the beating to my mother.

Awaits His Time

But, to get back to "Tony." He knew of my extremely sensitive nature and patiently awaited his time to take full advantage of this knowledge. His opportunity came the day we hit Fresno.

I was late at rehearsal and he gave me a terrible bawling out. I managed to stick it out, but as soon as we had finished, I dashed to my hotel room, where I cried and cried and cried, trying to make up my mind whether to quit the show or not.

My sister didn't know that I was in town. I hadn't called her because I wanted to surprise her. I wanted to send her a couple of tickets at the last moment, so our first meeting since I had become an actress would be over the footlights.

"Tony" came up to my room. He knocked at the door and I let him in. I was frantically trying to hide the traces of my grief. I didn't want him to know that I had been crying, but try to keep back the tears hard as I tried, was impossible, and I sobbed anew in his presence.

Then he became intolerable.

We fought. I scratched his face. And he kept kissing me again and again. Just when I had grown so weak and exhausted that I was near collapse, he suddenly relaxed his hold and hurled me away from him. Apparently, he was utterly disgusted over my struggles. He ran out, banging the door behind him.

I lay down on the bed and cried some more. Then I packed up my suitcase, intending to go to my sister's house and tell her everything. But, the old urge to make the name of Rose La France a byword in the theater, held me, and I showed up at the theater that night as usual.

I was one of the first to arrive. "Tony" was alone back stage. The minute he saw me, he drew himself up and growled:

"You've got some nerve, you have. Coming back here after what happened today. You're fired. And I'll have you blackballed so you'll never be able to get another job."

I pleaded with him, but he was adamant. By that time the other girls had begun to come in and I departed sorrowfully, a trembling, distracted wreck of a girl, too heartsick and too unstrung to know or care what happened to me.

Two hours later I was sobbing out my wild story of grief on my sister Hazel's strong shoulders. She reassured me and said she would help me to get back home, 400 miles away. She said she would send her husband down to collect my pay, and thrash Tony, if he could find him. And I was to forget all about a career on the stage and go back to school.

But such was not to be.

Prop Man Friend

One of the prop men who had a room adjoining mine in the hotel, had overheard our struggle. Also he had been hidden back stage and was a witness to Tony's actions when I came in to go to work.

I have forgotten his name, but never shall I forget his kindness. He went to Broncho Billy and told him everything. And, late that night came a message for me, stating that "Tony" had been fired, and that I was to rejoin the cast in Los Angeles, the next and biggest town on our circuit.

I was frantically happy again, although I did feel a bit bad about "Tony" losing his job.

Anyhow, I showed up in Los Angeles for rehearsal. And, that night I was back in my old position in the chorus, proudly speaking my cherished three-word part.

And, that same evening, real opportunity knocked at my door. Roland Sturgeon, Vitagraph's famous director, was in the audience. Later, I learned that William Rock had written him that I was promising material for the screen.

He watched the performance and then sent his card back stage, after the show. On it he scribbled directions for me to call the following day at the Vitagraph Studios, in Santa Monica.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Marriage Without Love Is Followed by Hate

Is a girl disgraced if she "keeps company with a young man—and then doesn't marry him?"

Don't laugh. Maybe they're silly questions to you. But they're serious—very serious to Paul and Grace and their Old World parents.

You see first Paul met Alice—and began to step her out. For a while he thought she was the Girl of His Dreams. She was quiet, modest and home-loving. And she was perfectly willing to be his Little Clinging Vine. In fact, she clung like glue. And he began to realize he'd made a mistake. So finally, he broke with her. Then he met Grace. From then on the plot thickens—plenty.

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I'm just a puzzled boy who needs and wants your expert advice. In January, 1929, at a neighborhood club dance, I asked a girl of my own age (24) to go with me. Her first name is Alice. She accepted—much to my later regret—and I went with her for several months after that. I always thought she was a quiet, modest home girl . . . not so pretty, but nice . . . whom I could perhaps learn to love.

Meets Second Girl

"However, after being with her and going to her home for several months, I saw and found out things I didn't like. God knows I tried to break away from her for months before I finally succeeded. I stopped calling on her more than once a week. I neglected her. I did everything I could to make her break with me, but she stubbornly refused to do that.

"Her folks and her friends took us for engaged and thought we were getting along splendidly . . . and she is of a nationality that thinks it is a disgrace to keep company and not marry.

"When I made her understand I wouldn't call on her any more she came to my house, and I foolishly kept postponing telling my folks the way things stood.

"Then in May, 1930, at the same club dance, I danced with another neighborhood girl. I'll call her Grace. We were immediately attracted to each other, and I soon knew that she was the one I really wanted. However, she refused to go out with me because she thought it wasn't fair to Alice. But when I told her the way things stood, she finally consented.

Complications Develop

"Then the storm broke. I mean the gossips. I surely thought Alice would give up when she found out about Grace. But no such luck. I finally convinced her the way things were. But my family and the neighbors thought I had done her a great wrong . . . that Grace had vamped me away. And they don't want me to have anything to do with Grace.

"However, we have been going together since the first of June. We are very much in love, and many of our friends tell us that we'll make a good match. Grace's parents, who have known me since I was a child, have taken me into their home and treated me like a son. They told Grace I would make a good husband, and they had made plans to let us get married within two years.

"But that's all over now. Some mean person went to them and told them that I had broken my engagement with Alice, and that my people were against Grace. This turned them against me, and now they are trying to force Grace to break away from me. Her father is nagging her to a point where she is almost ready for a nervous breakdown, but she tells me she loves me and will not give me up.

"Please help us, and tell us what to do. Miss Martin. We're utterly miserable. I know we'll never give each other up although we're suffering, hanging on to each other. How can we settle this thing? We thank you, and we'll be patiently watching your column for any advice you may give us. Was I wrong to break with Alice?

"PAUL."

Were you wrong to break with Alice?

No, son, you weren't. You would have been doing her as well as yourself a serious harm if you had continued to go with her and allowed yourself to be forced into marriage.

Time was when an engagement was considered almost as binding as a marriage. But most people have discarded that idea now. They have discarded it because they have come to realize that marriages won't and can't hang together under modern conditions unless there is real love and respect between husband and wife . . . unless people are really mated. And so it is necessary to have an experimental time during which the man and woman may have a chance to find out whether they are really suited to each other or not.

Did Right Thing

If they find they aren't suited, they should part. They should part whether one or both feel like drawing back. Because if they try to go on together, they'll bring themselves nothing but grief and part in the end anyway—after endless trouble and hard feeling. But this is a fact which many people will not admit.

"I love him so," cries the girl. "I'll make him love me. And even if he doesn't love me, he ought to marry me. It will break my heart and ruin my life if he doesn't."

Sometimes the woman says that. Sometimes the man says about the same. But whoever says it and whoever tries to force marriage because of that feeling, is taking unfair advantage and will pay for it in bitter misery. Love cannot be forced. And no marriage can succeed that is based on pity and condescension. Sooner or later hate will spring from such a mating.

It's better to break off quickly, while the breaking's good. You did right, Paul. Your broken engagement was no disgrace. Even though you had broken it at the alter it would have been no disgrace. The only real disgrace is to marry someone who doesn't want you or whom you don't want.

As for Grace—if she's of age, why not marry her now? And if she isn't of age and you do love each other, hang on and wait. Real love is worth any price you pay for it, son.

Fay King Warns Successful Persons to Beware of 'Fair Weather Friends'

YEAH! I GUESS YOU WIN!
ARE YOU GOIN TO BE A SAP ALL YOUR LIFE? LOOK WHAT THE REST OF 'EM ARE GETTIN' AWAY WITH? YOU AIN'T GOT NOTHIN' TO LOSE NO AN WE STAND A CHANCE TO CLEAN UP AN CLEAR OUT WITH A BUNCH OF DOUGH, SEE?
IN "FAIR WEATHER" AND "FOUL WEATHER" FALSE FRIENDS ARE A DANGER!
WHAT'S THE USE OF ACHIEVING FAME AN' FORTUNE IF YOU CAN'T HAVE A SWELL TIME?
I GUESS YOU'RE RIGHT!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

Extremes are always dangerous.

There is no greater menace to men and women than the false friends who flourish best at the extremes of good fortune or bad fortune.

Those who find themselves enjoying the fruits of success must beware of "fair weather friends."

Those who are temporarily sunk in the despair of trouble or unemployment must beware of "foul weather friends."

Those persuasive parasites who prey upon the full purse or the empty one succeed because of their victim's weakness and bewilderment.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Phone Conversation Proves to Be Battle of Wits

When Lillian was safely on her way back to the hotel—she had decided that she would not wait for me to interview the florist—I felt very much in the position of a person who has seized the handles to a pair of electric batteries and cannot let go. I had wanted so much to make Mary the center of things at her party, to give her the good time she never had had, that I had forgotten what effect her probable popularity might have upon Marion's enjoyment of the party.

I was fairly confident that Ronald's devotion to Marion had insulated him against any other feminine charms. But—after all—I reflected—one cannot predict how any young man may react to novelty—or any older one, either—I finished a bit grimly. And I felt that I should never forgive myself, if my zeal for Mary resulted in even temporary unhappiness for Marion.

But, I also reminded myself, there was no shadow of use in worrying about it. What would be would be, and I had enough to do before night to keep every moment of my time occupied. So I resolutely locked away all worried speculation concerning Ronald's possible behavior and hurried to the florist's.

I attended to another errand and then went to a telephone booth and called up Edith Fairfax, first at her apartment, and then, after no response at the office of the magazine whose management she shared with Dickey. When the office girl had called her to the telephone her voice was distinctly sulky beneath its veneer of flippancy.

"Lo, Madge! Where's that good-for-nothing husband of yours? The low-life promised me he'd be down early this morning, and I ask you, just look at the clock."

"Why ask me?" I retorted suavely. "I'm far away from the hotel, and I've been up for hours. I'd like to haul Dicky out for you, but it's impossible at this distance. Besides, I value my peace of mind, and I don't envy anybody who tries to waken him before noon."

"Noon?" she echoed, shrilly. "That means he won't be down here until after luncheon, if he comes at all. Well! I just see myself standing for that. I'm going to ring the hotel now, and tell the operator to set the buzzer on your phone and keep it there until someone answers."

"I'm sorry, Edith, but I cannot permit you to do that," I said formally. "You see, Mary is also asleep in the apartment, and I cannot have her disturbed. Indeed, it would do you no good to ring, for I gave orders before I left that the operator was not to ring the apartment, but was to take all messages until I return."

"All right, Protector of the Faithful!" she gibed. "I'll get by alone. But the Lord help the Dicky-bird when I get my hands on him. I won't leave a single pin-feather. However, this isn't frying any onions. I'm certain you didn't call me up just for the pleasure of hearing my velvety contralto. What's on your mind?"

"Nothing but flowers, just at present," I said, trying to speak lightly. "I am commissioned to ask you what is the color of the gown you're wearing tonight. I'll tell you a secret. You're to get a corsage bouquet."

"If Dicky Graham thinks he can square himself for not coming down here by sending me a bouquet for tonight, he has one or two great thoughts still to think," she began, but I interrupted her summarily, trying hard to keep from my voice the anger engendered by her calm assumption that Dicky had planned to send her a corsage of flowers.

"You are arguing from a false premise," I said, with a strangled little laugh. "It isn't Dicky who's sending the flowers."

"Who, then?"

"Mr. Veritzen."

"Veritzen! Not to me, he isn't. What's his big idea, anyway?"

"You've named it correctly," I said smoothly. "It is a big idea. He has asked to be told the color of every gown to be worn tonight, and he intends to send a bouquet for each."

She was silent for the space of a second. Then she laughed.

"And what does the Dicky-bird say to such munificence as that?" she asked unpleasantly.

Household Hints

If you have had an accident to a good pair of stockings by catching them on the roughened rung of the kitchen chair or table, either sandpaper the rung until smooth or wrap it neatly with a piece of adhesive tape. You are almost certain to repeat your accident if you just let the rungs stay that way.

A useful cleaning fluid for removing oil and grease from fabrics, cleaning floors, windows, metals, etc.: Dissolve in two quarts of boiling water four ounces of castile or hard white soap shavings; cool, and add one-half ounce of salt-peter, stirring until dissolved. Strain through cheesecloth and let it settle; take off scum and add one-half pint of ammonia. Bottle and cork tight.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Eye-Strain and Its Companion—Headache

We are daily reminded over the radio and by advertisements how important is the care of the teeth. Yet little mention is made by anyone of the great need for care of the eyes.

Dr. Copeland

We have thirty-two teeth and only one pair of eyes. If we lose a tooth we can depend upon the remainder to do the work. If need be, the dentist can supply us with artificial teeth that do the work almost as well as real ones.

It is true that artificial eyes can be bought. But such purchases are made for cosmetic reasons and of course not for sight.

In the care of the eyes we should follow the same hygienic rules that apply to the general care of our health. Never abuse your eyes. Remember and appreciate their value, and treat them accordingly.

Everybody should have the eyes examined at least once. Quite often eye defect exists, of which the victim is utterly unaware. Early care of such a condition is likely to eliminate later discomfort. Eye examination and proper prescribing of glasses will do away with the so-called "eye strain" and its familiar companion, headache.

Unfortunately, we are a vain and proud people. Most of us dislike wearing glasses. You would be amazed to learn the number of glasses that are sold yearly and the number of glasses that were actually worn.

It is not at all uncommon for one to get glasses, and then never use them. If you are "nearsighted," or "farsighted," or have some ocular defect, you should wear glasses. Glasses kept in your bag or pocketbook will never help your precious eyes.

There are a few general rules which it will pay to observe: Never read on moving vehicles. It is best not to read while lying down. At all times attempt to have the light come from over your shoulder. Do not read in glaring or in dim light. A soft, mellow light is easily obtained, and is the ideal light to use.

A common practice, which should be prohibited, is the removal from the eyes, by inexperienced persons, of cinders and foreign bodies. This is usually undertaken in accordance with the combined and composite advice of the assembled friends. It may vary from the advice to blow the nose, to rubbing the left ear and the offending eye at the same time. I have never heard that standing on the head has been recommended for the removal of a cinder from the eye, but it would not surprise me if this has been done. Usually the cinder remains in spite of the various maneuvers.

Never use a hard substance in an attempt to remove a cinder from the eye. If you insist upon handling the eye, make sure your hands are clean.

It is far better to go to the nearest physician, who will remove the object immediately without any damage to the eye. Many serious and unnecessary results have come from neglect or carelessness in caring for this minor complaint.

Many people who have chronically inflamed eyes, are constantly trying patent eye washes. This is not advisable. It is far better not to use any eye wash without first consulting your physician.

There are, of course, many standard and safe remedies. Boric acid solution may be used without danger of irritating the eyes. Yellow oxide of mercury ointment is a familiar house household remedy for inflamed lids. But in every case it is unwise to use any drug without the supervision of a physician.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Woman Doctor's Social Name

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me the proper way to address the envelope of an announcement to a doctor and his wife, who is also a physician? Her name, as she uses it in practicing, is Dr. Marilyn R. Jones, and his is Dr. Edward Jones. I have known Dr. Marilyn Jones for several years, but do not know her husband. Should I address it: Dr. and Mrs. Edward Jones, or simply, Dr. Marilyn R. Jones? W. W.

I wish that it would be possible for you to find out what form of name this woman doctor prefers to use for her social life. Could you do this? Many women doctors make a very definite distinction between the name that they use professionally—Dr. Marilyn Jones—and the name they wish to be known by socially—Mrs. Edward Jones. Or, if they are unmarried, they prefer to be called professionally Dr. Marilyn Jones, but socially, Miss Marilyn Jones. I know of several women physicians who make a very special point of this, and I agree with them absolutely.

If you find that she wishes to use the Mrs. socially, address your invitation to Dr. and Mrs. Edward Jones. If she prefers the professional form of her name, or if you cannot find out which she prefers, then it would be safer, I think, to use the Dr. Then address your envelope like this: Dr. Edward Jones
Dr. Marilyn Jones
79 Mill Street

Even if you do not know her husband, a formal announcement should be addressed to them both.

You May Turn and Look at The Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me if it is proper to turn in your seat and look at the bride as she walks up the aisle in church?

CONSTANT READER.

Yes, the custom of doing this has made it proper. It is now taken for granted. And quite reasonably so, for the few minutes of bridal glory are so few that they must all be taken advantage of. And after all, a formal wedding is more or less of a pageant, with the bride as the heroine.

Staying European Plan at A Hotel

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to stay at a hotel, European plan, and I would be pleased if you would give me all the hints you can. I would particularly appreciate your answering this question: Staying, European Plan; I would like to dine at the hotel occasionally. How is the payment for these meals arranged?

V. B.

With this arrangement, you pay for each meal as you have it in the hotel.

After the Theater

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

VERA.

One should face the stage, keeping as near as possible to the back of the seat in front of you. In this way you will least disturb the people already seated, or standing to let you pass.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Can you arch your back? Get down on all fours, lift the middle portion of the body. Lie on the back and lift up on elbows and heels. It is the strong, flexible backbone that makes for graceful movement.

Ice applications are recommended for treatment of enlarged pores. Laving with witch hazel refines the skin. Less fat in the diet creates a more delicate texture of the facial wrapping. Hot water isn't so good because it is relaxing to the tissues. When it is used, the cold compress should invariably follow to stir up a reaction of the blood stream.

The camomile rinse will brighten blonde hair. Steep three tablespoonfuls of camomile in a pint of water for 10 minutes. Cool, strain and pour over the topcrown immediately after the shampoo. Remove with a thorough spraying of clear, tepid water and dry the hair quickly.

Don't pin hopes on the straight surface of a pumice stone as a cure for superfluous hair. All it does is to cut the growth at that point where it emerges from the skin. The pumice performs precisely the same as a razor, only it doesn't make as neat a job. Tweezing superfluous hair is less likely to stimulate the growth than cutting it.

Choose toilet soap with care. There are any number of proprietory soaps that are bland and pure. Occasionally there flourishes a temperamental complexion that kicks up a protest against soap, in which event the skin surface can be cleansed with oil, or a cold cream applied generously before soap and warm water are applied with a soft cloth and without friction. Soap is a champion cosmetic; it ousts germs.

Give your hair the air, searcher for pulchritude. Ventilation is good for scalp and tresslocks. At bedtime, run fingers through the glorious crown, shaking out the strands, skipping over the scalp surface to stimulate the blood streams and make them promenade. This beauty rite is particularly necessary for the woman who wears a close-fitting hat and keeps it on a large part of the day. Brushing clears the topmop of dust and dandruff but massage of the scalp is necessary for a healthy growth.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, February 10

Particularly lively and interesting developments may be looked for, on this day, according to the stellar activities. The energies will be volatile and aggressive, but these may be called upon to overcome many vexatious and insidious obstacles to success. Finances should be wisely supervised. Personal affairs are interesting and intriguing.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of heightened activities with the energies under high stimulus to action and aggressiveness. But there may be much to irritate and frustrate, which may be managed and suppressed by wisdom and sagacity. Personal affairs flourish.

A child born on this day should be versatile, energetic and socially popular and should use these endowments to achieve success and happiness in its eventful career.

CHEAP POWER ROOSEVELT'S AIM IN FIGHT

By WILLIAM LAWBY,
Universal Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 9.—A definite effort will be made this week to end the deadlock over marketing of the tremendous power to be generated at the proposed St. Lawrence River Hydro-Electric Development.

Gov. Roosevelt and his special commission, which has reported on the public development project, are not in accord on this phrase. Furthermore, the commission itself is divided on this question.

The chief executive, it is understood, insists that whatever legislation is presented, the report of the commission must contain what he pleases to call a "bargaining clause."

This is a provision in the bill that the state shall be empowered to erect its own transmission and distribution system in the event the state and the Niagara Hudson Power Corporation are unable to arrive at an agreement which would guarantee power to small consumers at a reasonable rate.

EXECUTIVE UPHELD

Thomas F. Conway, of Plattsburg, former lieutenant governor and member of the St. Lawrence Power Development Commission, rendered a minority report sustaining the executive in the foregoing position.

The enabling bill contemplates creation of a state water power commission to launch the engineering phases of the power enterprise; to lay the groundwork for the contract; to negotiate the necessary international and federal agreements and to set up the financial plan.

At the same time, this commission would be mandated to make a searching study of the problem of transmission and distribution. Their decision on distribution, however, would be a compromise designed to provide for operation until differences on the marketing question could be settled.

SEIZURE PROPOSED

Indications are the Republican majority in the Legislature is inclined to accede to such a compromise arrangement, which will mean nothing can be done toward the actual arrangement, which will mean nothing can be done toward the actual physical accomplishment of the project for at least another year.

A rather startling proposal came from Republican quarters recently and was offered as a possible alternative weapon against holdup tactics by the power interests. This called for seizure by the state of the existing privately-owned transmission lines through condemnation proceedings.

Olmstead was walking from his automobile to the stables, where he intended to exercise some of his polo ponies, when he fell. Physicians said a heart attack caused death. He was the son of Mrs. Vance McCormick, of Harrisburg, Pa.

As a polo player Olmstead was known as "Ted," and for the last month he had played with various low-goal teams. Olmstead graduated from Harvard in 1921 and from Oxford in 1923. He was a member of the Hunting Club, New York, and the Pacific Union Club, San Francisco.

FAMED STARS HERE TO STAGE OPERAS

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Mr. Pfarr

Usually humble, Attorney Dennis Mulvihill is a proud Irishman these days, for he feels that he has skipped through his baptism of fire unscorched. A retiring young man, he is not a confident public speaker. When the Legislature convened in Harrisburg recently it was his lot, as the new assistant chief clerk, to make his first announcement to a Senate indifferent to announcements. Anxious to please his political papa, Jimmy Coyne, and hopeful that his throat would stand the strain, he arose to address his audience. He was embarrassingly self-conscious when he stood up. He coughed. He coughed again, and he felt like slumping back into the obscurity of his chair. But the Mulvihill strain, as they say, urged him on and he came through with a ringing announcement, clear and patriotic, that His Excellency, the Governor, would positively make his budget speech to the Senate, come tomorrow. It was neither here nor there that probably nobody in the Senate chamber was listening to the rookie clerk, but it was both here and there to Mulvihill a few minutes later when an elderly legislator from a rural district hobbled up to the young clerk's desk and piped, "Young fella, how long you been a preacher?"

The father of a 3-year-old girl told us about calling the doctor when his child developed a bit o ffever a few days ago.

The physician, Dr. A. M. Rubinstein, of Beechview, was writing a prescription for the 3-year-old.

"I know your last name," the doctor said to the child, "but what is your first name?"

The child smiled and nodded.

"What," the doctor repeated, "is your first name? What does your mother call you?"

"Pest," the child answered.

Burt Cooper, once the booking agent for Lillian Russell, came to town as a witness in the Calvit will claim. We asked him to tell us a few stories about the stage beauty, but he was so full of adjectives describing Miss Russell's beauty and grace and generosity that he had little time for anything else. A former chauffeur for Miss Russell, who was listening to Cooper, also contributed a word. He said once, when a relative of Miss Russell's had asked him whether he had enough gas in the car, Miss Russell said, kindly enough, that what was wrong with this country was that people mind their own business, adding that the gasoline supply was the chauffeur's business.

Cooper remembered one incident which occurred almost nightly when Miss Russell was sharing honors with Willie Collier in a Weber and Fields show. It was "The Jubilee," and in it there was a scene in which Collier exhibited a photograph of his sweetheart to Miss Russell. Well, every performance at this point Miss Russell would laugh and become lost in her lines, for the moment. The wag Collier was forever showing her not a picture of his sweetheart but a ridiculous photograph of anything calculated to make her laugh.

Troops Suffered In Wintry Blasts, Pershing Reveals

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING,

Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces In the World War.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Final Agreement With British on Use of Our Troops—War Council Decides Conflict Can't Be Ended Until 1919 When U. S. Reaches Maximum Strength—British High Command Sees Lloyd George Disapproving Their Conduct of War—Americans Short of Clothing in Hard Winter of 1917-18.

Once Gen. Bliss and I had reached an understanding as to our attitude toward amalgamation of our troops with the British, he gave me his support in later conferences. When we saw the British representatives for further talks at Versailles January 29, 1918, all their arguments were met frankly and squarely. After they had presented their case, Prime Minister Lloyd George asked Bliss for his views, to which he replied:

"Pershing will speak for us and whatever he says with regard to the disposition of the American forces will have my approval."

Gen. Pershing.

I then submitted a compromise program which Bliss had already seen, and the British concluded to take it under advisement.

The following day, while we were en route to Versailles together, Bliss expressed some doubt whether they would accept, but when we met with Mr. Lloyd George and some of the others who had been present the previous day he acknowledged that my objections to amalgamation were sound and told me that he had said so to his confreres the day before. An agreement was then signed by Mr. Lloyd George, Gen. Maurice and myself as set forth in the following copy of the memorandum submitted and later cabled to Washington:

"In order to meet the situation as presented by Sir William Robertson and hasten the arrival and training of troops, it is proposed that the British government use the available sea transportation in question for bringing over the personnel of entire divisions under the following conditions:

Sir William

"1. That the infantry and auxiliary troops of these divisions be trained with British divisions by battalions, under such plan as may be agreed upon.

"2. That the artillery be trained under American direction in the use of French material as at present.

"3. That the higher commanders and staff officers be assigned for training and experience with corresponding units of the British army.

"4. That when sufficiently trained, these battalions be reformed into regiments and that when the artillery is fully trained all the units comprising each division be united under their own officers for service.

"5. That the above plan be carried out without interference with the plans now in operation for bringing over American forces.

"6. That question of supply be arranged by agreement between the British and American commanders-in-chief.

"7. That question of arms and equipment be settled in similar manner."

Englishmen Criticized

"We have no objections to the program which you suggested, but in our judgment it would be wiser for the British to undertake to transport six complete divisions across the sea to be disposed of and trained as you direct in conference of course with the commanding officers of the other forces."

Of course this was in exact agreement with my views as expressed in the proposal I made to the British and to which they agreed, but the fortunes of war intervened more than once to prevent strict adherence to plans and agreements.

The Supreme War Council began its third session January 30. At the opening session Mr. Lloyd George made a statement in some detail of the situation on the Allied fronts. He then spoke of the large number of casualties the Allies had suffered during 1917 and in a very pointed manner declared that the costly offensives had produced no tangible results. Instead, he said, the Allies now found themselves short of man power at a critical period of the war. His sharp criticism was evidently directed at Sir Douglas Haig and Gen. Robertson, but neither was given an opportunity to reply.

The Military Representatives presented a joint note with reference to military policy, as directed at the December meeting, and the opinion given was identical with that of the conference at Compiegne January 24 and also in August at the meeting in Paris, except that the campaign under Gen. Allenby then in progress in Palestine should continue.

It will be recalled that these two informal conferences of Commanders-in-Chief had concluded that the Allies should remain on the defensive on all fronts until the Americans should arrive in sufficient force to warrant the offensive.

Allies Superior

The joint note was approved as the decision of the Council, with the understanding, as suggested by the French, that no white troops should be sent from France to Palestine. It was decidedly the opinion of M. Clemenceau and of all others present who expressed themselves that the war could not be ended until 1919, when the American army, it was thought, would reach its maximum strength.

The Allied forces at the moment were superior in all active fronts, except in the Balkans, but the Greek mobilization, when completed, would add sufficient strength to give the Allies the advantage there also. The American strength was then negligible, but the prospect was that we should have a few more divisions ready for service by June, and by September possibly 17 or the equivalent of 34 French divisions.

The danger on the Western Front lay in the continuous increase of the German forces and in their ability to concentrate in turn against the French and British, and as neither had sufficient reserves of their own it was clear that unless some arrangement could be made between them for better co-ordination and support the war might easily be lost before the Americans should arrive.

The study of this problem by the military representatives led to another joint note which proposed a plan for the organization of a general Allied reserve. It provided that the British, French and Italian armies should each set apart a certain number of divisions to constitute this reserve, which would be called into action only in a great emergency.

The discussion of this question became rather acrimonious. Haig and Petain both pointed out that they would be short of divisions very soon in case of severe fight-

'HILL' CHURCH BOMBERS SOUGHT

Three Women Hurt, 30 Homes Rocked by Blast; Labor Trouble Is Denied

The bombing last night of the Ebenezer Baptist Church, at Wylie avenue and Devilliers street, which resulted in injury to three persons, routed a score of families from their beds and shattered windows of 30 buildings, was being investigated by detectives and police today.

Police said the bomb had been hurled through a window on Devilliers street by a man who leaped from a slowly-moving automobile. The church, with a Negro congregation of 2,500, is being rebuilt.

DENIES CONFLICT

The three injured, who were returned to their homes after being treated at Passavant Hospital, were Miss Esther Fine, 17, of 1929 Wylie avenue; Mrs. Lena Lubetsky, 20, of 151 Devilliers street, and Mrs. Laura B. Scott, 37, Negro, of 155 Devilliers street. Several other women, police said, suffered shock, but did not require medical attention.

The Rev. T. J. King, of 509 Junilla street, pastor of the church, denied there was congregational dissension. W. B. Hartley, Homestead, contractor, asserted he had had no trouble with labor. The edifice is being remodeled at a cost of $80,000, the minister declared. During the remodeling, services were being held at the People's Tabernacle at Addison and Heman streets.

TERROR IN DISTRICT

Miss Fine, a Fifth Avenue High School student, suffered a slight head injury when struck by a falling window in her home. Mrs. Lubetsky and Mrs. Scott were bruised when hurled from their beds.

Occupants of houses in the immediate vicinity ran into the rain terror-stricken. Firemen who responded to a still alarm estimtaed the damage which consisted chiefly of shattered windows, at $5,000.

Henry R. Eby, county farm agent, and Frank Shaffer, manager of the natural resources division of the Pittsburgh chamber, were to speak at the opening session of the two-day poultry school, which opens tomorrow morning in the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. The school is being sponsored jointly by the chamber and the Allegheny County Agricultural Extension Association.

Other speakers at the school will be H. H. Kauffman, extension poultry specialist of Pennsylvania State College; M. D. Alessio, of Treesdale Farms; Mrs. William Heinlein, of Coraopolis; Walter Baldesberger of Bridgeville, and C. M. Ferguson, extension poultry specialist of Ohio State University.

Ministers Oppose Blue Law Changes

Protest of proposed legislation to liberalize the state Sunday laws was voiced today at the weekly meeting of the Pittsburgh Methodist Episcopal ministerial meeting.

A resolution expressing its opposition was to be sent Representative M. A. Musmanno and other legislators introducing measures for Sunday amusements. The resolution expressed satisfaction with existing laws.

OWENS GETS 30 DAYS IN JAIL

Fred Owens, 1420 Bedford avenue, arrested on information of District Attorney Andrew T. Park after Magistrate Leo Rothenberg had fined him $100 on a charge of keeping a disorderly house, pleaded guilty before Judge George V. Moore today and was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail on a charge of possessing liquor.

Owens' case was listed for January 22, but he was in Passavant Hospital at the time, unable to appear. He will begin serving the sentence tomorrow.

Beggar Who Played Numbers Gets Jail

Mike Gabos, 28, of Dayton, arrested last night at the home of Harry I. Miller, 2006 Wendover street, organizer of the Helping Hand, when he solicited food, was sentenced 30 days in the workhouse today by Magistrate Charles Papale in East End Police Court.

Police say Gabos had $4 cash and a lottery receipt revealing he had wagered $1 on today's "number."

Man Hurt by Brick, Police Seek Brother

West Homestead police today were searching for Ernest Austin, 43, a Negro, who is alleged to have hurled a brick through a window, striking his brother, Thomas Austin, 55, on the head. The injured man was admitted to the Homestead Hospital late last night, where his condition was said to be serious. The brothers reside in 863 Forest avenue, West Homestead.

Woman Has Mate Fined for Late Air Concerts

Because he played the radio in his home at all hours of the night, Steve Silak, 26, of 3020 Wiggin street, was arraigned in Morals Court yesterday on his wife's complaint and fined $10. Mrs. Silak testified she could not stand the noise and called a policeman.

PAROLE GIVEN BANK CLERK

With his wife and three children in Federal Court today, Christ Denhard, 50, of 859 Taylor avenue, Avalon, for 27 years teller at the National Bank of America, North Side, pleaded guilty of embezzling $15,000 of bank funds over a period of 10 years, by manipulating accounts of foreign depositors. Many character witnesses, including James Wettach, member of the Legislature, appeared for Denhard. He was placed on probation for three years by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker. Judge Schoonmaker explained Denhard had spent seven weeks in jail and had promised to sell his home to make restitution.

Wettach, Joseph R. Hite and other North Side business men said Denhard had access to their registers and had made collections and deposits for them for many years. Hite said he would give him a job if the court would be lenient.

Denhard's wife testified her husband had worked for the bank for 27 years and that his salary for the past four years was $250 a month. She said:

"My husband never gambled or speculated. He used the money to provide a living for his family. Much of the money was spent for sickness."

Through Louis Little, her attorney, she assumed much of the responsibility for the defalcations, declaring she had been living beyond their means.

Woman, Ill, Dies After Taking Poison

Despondency on account of illness is believed by attaches of the coroner's office to have caused Esther Masterson, 36, of 29 Syrian street, to commit suicide by swallowing poison late Saturday. She died yesterday in South Side Hospital.

DOLES SCORED BY ECONOMIST

Doles do not cure the disease of unemployment, but aggravate the condition, declared Dr. William Trufant Foster, director of the Pollak Foundation of Economic Research of Newton, Mass., in urging the government to provide work for the unemployed before the Hungry Club meeting today in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Dr. Foster also spoke at a conference during the afternoon in the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce and attended by the organization's research and statistics committee and engineers' council. These groups have been studying the unemployment problem.

Dr. Foster said:

"Jobs create self-respect and the habit of work. Doles do not create jobs; they create loafers. Let the government do what it promised to do, and should have done, 16 months ago. Speed up and enlarge the federal construction program. Cut the red tape. Abandon wasteful thrift."

Safe Crackers Fail In Railroad Job

East Pittsburgh police today were searching for robbers who failed in an attempt to batter open a safe in the ticket office of the Pennsylvania Railroad station of that borough last night. A 12-pound sledge and a pick owned by the railroad company were used.

A woman train rider, who saw the safe crackers in action, called police. Nothing was stolen, according to a report of the railroad company today.

Hurt on Railway, Yardmaster Dies

Joseph Metcalf, 42, of 1702 Montour avenue, Coraopolis, yardmaster on the Montour Railroad, died yesterday from injuries received when he was crushed between two coal cars at the Champion Mines of the Pittsburgh Coal Company.

300 IN PARTY SUPPORTING SINGERS

Excitement, Confusion Mark Arrival of Entourage; Present 'Lucia' Tonight

The Chicago Civic Opera Company, with many noted songbirds and a supporting group of 300 persons, arrived this morning for engagements tonight and tomorrow night at Syria Mosque.

Amid a flurry of excitement, the babel of many voices and much attendant confusion, the singers were taken from the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Station to their hotels after their trip from Boston. The company includes such stars as Tito Schipa, Claudia Muzio, Richard Bonelli, Margherita Salvi, Charles Marshall, Hilda Burke and John Charles Thomas. Three special trains were needed to transport the principals, chorus, ballet, orchestra and technicians.

PERFORMANCES SCHEDULED

Tonight at 8:15 the company will present Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," with Schipa, Salvi, Bonelli and others in the cast. Frank St. Leger will conduct. The ballet will give incidental dances. Tomorrow night "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci" will be presented, with Muzio, Marshall, Thomas, Tourel, Burke and others in the cast.

Pittsburgh was chosen one of 11 cities for this season's tour. For the first time in four years opera will be presented here by a major company. If the presentations are financially successful, the company will include Pittsburgh in its annual tours, according to Eugene Connelly, who, with a group of guarantors, has brought the company here.

The offering tonight, "Lucia Di Lammermoor," is based on Sir Walter Scott's "The Bride of Lammermoor." Its sextet is one feature of a musical score of great beauty. The story is dramatic, with libretto by Cammarano.

TICKETS AT MOSQUE

For the convenience of patrons special arrangements have been made for the sale of tickets at Syria Mosque tonight at 7 o'clock.

Patrons are requested to be seated at 8:15. The final curtain tonight will be at 10:50 and Tuesday night at 11:15. Special traffic arrangements have been made with Inspector Dorsey to permit patrons to enter Syria Mosque from either the boulevard or Lytton avenue entrances. Canopies will be placed from the curb to the marquee at each entrance.

Pastor Denounces Spirit Mediums as Frauds

Spiritualistic mediums are "fakers," the Rev. Dr. William M. Woodfin, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian Church, declared in speaking on "Talking With the Dead" at the Squirrel Hill community services in the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, last night. He said:

"People like to be deceived. Then, too, people want to communicate with their loved ones and these people prey upon such people. I have listened time and again to mediums talking to people who believe and about all that I could ever get was: 'We are well. We are happy. Don't do this. Don't do that,' but so far nothing worth while has come back from the dead to the living.

"It is dishonoring to God to think that He has committed our dead and their spirits to the keeping of a lot of fake mediums who are capable of calling them up on a moment's notice. God has not committed the souls of His saints to fakers and deceivers."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 9.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Preached in Claremore Sunday morning, and the deacons brought in a collection of three thousand dollars. Chelsea in the afternoon, and Tulsa last night. Men make a town, not location or surrounding territory. That's why Tulsa has had such a record.

Will Rogers

From what I hear from all over the country the towns are waking up to their Red Cross responsibilities, committees have been lax in getting their drives started, the same as the whole country has been late in realizing the need of it.

1930 was a year of "under and over estimation." Nothing was guessed right all year. Optimism was overrated, and pessimism was underrated.

Yours, WILL.

BELLEVUE MAN HELD FOR JURY IN SLAYING

WITNESSES SAY GUN WENT OFF IN TUSSLE

12 Tell Story of Ross Twp. Killing to Coroner's Quiz; Other Suspect Released

A coroner's jury today recommended Emil Schoen, of Bellevue, be held to await action of a grand jury on a murder charge in connection with the killing of Walter A. Thompson.

Adolph A. Giger, in whose home, in Jacks Run road, Ross Township, Thompson was shot to death February 1, and who also was arrested, was released by the coroner's jury.

The verdict came after Giger's brother, Herman, and Alex Maier testified that Schoen, grappling with Thompson for the possession of the sawed-off shotgun, fired the fatal shots.

GANG OUT TO "SEE FIGHT"

Ten other witnesses, who are being held on charges of entering a building with intent to commit a felony, told how Thompson had come to Adolph Giger's home to avenge a beating he had received at the hands of Giger. They testified they accompanied Thompson to get a drink and see the fight.

The gang came twice to Giger's home on the night in question. The first time the mob was led by a woman identified only as Mrs. Hoffman, it was testified.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT, CLAIM

The story of a free-for-all fight, which terminated when Schoen, armed with the shotgun, ordered Thompson and his followers from the house, was told by Herman Giger and Maier.

Thompson, they said, paused in the doorway, and as he and Schoen came into contact they wrestled for possession of the gun. As Thompson who seized the barrel of the gun, raised the weapon upward, the shots were fired, it was testified.

Two radio addresses were made yesterday in the interests of the $450,000 campaign to open next week for the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson, of the Temple Rodef Shalom, and Leonard S. Levine, chairman of speakers for the campaign, made the broadcasts. Musical programs accompanied each.

All great revolutions and disturbances have been caused by failure of those in positions of wealth and power to regard seriously their responsibilities to those in need, in suffering and in sorrow, Dr. Goldenson said. Levine presented a sketch describing highlights of the work performed by the 17 agencies of the Jewish organization.

Frank R. S. Kaplan, county chairman for the drive, announced that a meeting will be held tomorrow night in Duquesne to discuss plans for the campaign there. Dr. L. B. Bernstein, executive director of the federation, will speak.

Benjamin E. Sherman has been appointed campaign chairman in Bridgeville, Carnegie, Crafton and Ingram. Herman Levine, McKeesport chairman, has called a meeting for Thursday night in the Penn-McKee Hotel to give workers final instructions.

Be Sure You Are In the Right Office Above Music Store

NO MATTER how conscientious you are—no matter how anxious you are to do your best, it just cannot be done consistently day in and day out, when you are only one-half well.

Body weakness, lack of appetite, underweight, paleness, sallow complexion, pimples and boils are symptoms of a low blood count. These may indicate that you need S.S.S.

S.S.S. restores the red-blood-cells to normal. Your appetite picks up, your whole body is strengthened, invigorated—you feel like yourself again!

How to recognize a low blood count

Fatigue without any apparent cause, sluggishness, loss of appetite, loss of body weight, paleness, boils and pimples are outstanding symptoms of a LOW RED-BLOOD-CELL COUNT. The red cells are your body builders. They carry nourishment to every part of the body. Also, they remove impurities from the tissues. When your red cells drop to 50 per cent of normal strength you haven't the proper number of workers to keep you "fit." 60 per cent of normal is dangerous.

(Left) Microscopic view of healthy red-blood-cells. The blood stream should contain about 5,000,000 of these cells to the cubic millimeter. They carry nourishment and oxygen to every part of the body. Also they remove impurities from the tissues.

(Right) Anemic red-blood-cells—only 60 per cent of normal strength—they lack the power to resist infection and disease or to rebuild flesh and to carry away the impurities. Such a condition is responsible for body weakness, loss of appetite, underweight, paleness, sallow complexion, boils and pimples.

RICHMOND AWARDS O. G. BIG VICTORY OVER RIVAL BRANDS IN RIPLEY'S FIRST TASTE-TEST DOWN SOUTH

By ROBERT RIPLEY, Himself

I went down to Richmond, Virginia, the other day. Richmond, one of the nation's capitals in tobacco products, where they know tobacco like Detroit knows motor cars.

"Don't try to guess 'em, Richmond!" I said. "Just smoke 'em . . . and pick out the cigarette that tastes best."

It was the same old story. Again, O. G. rolled up a decisive majority vote. Chosen by the world's foremost tobacco town for its superior throat-ease and smoothness.

If that isn't a Supreme Court decision . . . what is?

How to Get Relief From Catarrh.

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness, or head noises, go to all May's & Liggett's Drug Stores or your druggist and get 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength); take this home, add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to make, tastes pleasant and costs little. Every one who has catarrh should give this treatment a trial. You will probably find it just what you need.

Schipa Spending 'Miserable' Day :-: Preparing for Tonight's Opera Opening

Famed Schipa at Hotel Schenley with the traveler's chess board without which "I wouldn't know what to do with myself" in Pittsburgh of a Sunday afternoon. He was resting to sing the principal role of "Lucia de Lammermoor" at Syria Mosque tonight, spoke of "Blue Laws."

SCHIPA BORED BY BLUE LAWS

Dapper in a brown, striped suit and a polka-dot bow tie, a short, stocky man with raven black hair and warm, olive complexion, sat in his room at the Schenley Hotel and gazed out of the window with dark, tragic eyes.

Tito Schipa, golden-voiced tenor, who sings the principal role in "Lucia di Lammermoor" tonight at Syria Mosque, with other members of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, turned away from his view of depressing skies, and uttered a hollow sound, considerably like a groan of anguish. He asked:

"What, oh what, do you do in Pittsburgh on sundays?"

He pointed to the table nearby:

"If it wasn't for that game I wouldn't know what to do with myself."

He was referring to a miniature chess game fashioned for travelers. His Spanish accompanist, Frederick Longes, and H. A. Cahill, his personal representative, had been whiling away the long afternoon, alternately playing chess with the star.

Margherita Salvi, petite prima donna, signs the leading role in the opera tonight. In a vivid, flowered dressing gown, she sat in her room while her mother, Senora De Iglesias, loosened the diva's hair and combed it as she used to when her famous Margherita was only a child.

GARAGE FUMES KILL MAN

The body of Samuel Newman, 52, of 1440 Barnesdale street, was found yesterday on the floor of his garage, where he had been working on his automobile. Carbon monoxide fumes caused his death, the report to the coroner stated.

Newman went to the garage at 8 o'clock to work on the automobile. Three hours later his wife, Mollie, went to investigate his absence and found his body. Dr. E. B. Frieberg, summoned by members of the family, worked over the victim for some time before pronouncing him dead. Police and representative of the Mine Safety Appliance Company also worked in vain.

BANDITS ESCAPE BEFORE RAID

Following a trail to an alleged bandit hideout in Fifth avenue, McKeesport, county detectives and McKeesport police yesterday raided the place only to find their suspects had fled a few hours before. Four sawed-off shotguns were seized in the rooms, detectives say.

Detectives Frank Ritz and Robert McMillan, investigating the recent robbery in the home of Mrs. Minnie Pyros, adjoining the South Park barbecue stand, trailed the bandits to McKeesport. The officers declare five men and a woman comprise the gang.

Mrs. Pyros was robbed of jewelry valued at $5,400 by the bandit gang. John Kunkle, a visitor, was beaten by the robbers. Detectives James Reddington, David Carlin and Michael Stabile aided Ritz and McMillan make the raid yesterday.

MAN KILLS SELF AT WEDDING PARTY

Young Father Suicide as Guests Arrive to Celebrate Anniversary, Christening

A day of expected happiness for young men and women who gathered in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Wroblewski, 2711 Mulberry way, to celebrate with the couple their first wedding anniversary and the christening of their infant daughter, was turned to sadness yesterday afternoon, deputy coroners state, when the young husband committed suicide.

While friends of the couple were gathered in their small two-room apartment, a shot was heard in the basement. Several men who rushed downstairs found the husband unconscious on the floor, a bullet wound in the head. As police were removing the victim to St. Francis' Hospital, they passed three musicians who had been engaged to entertain the guests. The husband, aged 25, was dead when admitted to the hospital.

The suicide occurred while the child was being christened in St. Stanislaus Church, Twenty-first and Smallman streets. The godparents had taken the infant daughter to the church for the ceremonies and upon their return home learned of the suicide. The wife, Martha, 18, collapsed in the house.

Police say that the husband had attempted suicide on two previous occasions during his year of married life. Last February he tried to leap into the Allegheny River from the Thirty-first Street Bridge. A motorist is said to have dragged him back from the rail. On another occasion he is said to have swallowed poison in his home. The young wife told police that her husband had been acting queer for several hours preceeding the suicide.

Prize Butter A Test of Food Stores

Test a food store by the butter it sells and you won't go far wrong. The butter you can judge in several ways. The sure way is by the verdicts of the butter makers' own jury. These verdicts are rendered at the butter makers' conventions, state and national.

At the Iowa convention in Waterloo four butter makers took first and second prizes among 217 entries in the senior and junior contests. Their butter is to be found only in A&P stores.

The National Convention in Minneapolis gave its highest prize—the grand sweepstakes—to W. F. Wargowsky, manager of the Farmers' Co-operative Creamery Company in Boyden, Iowa. Butter makers from all over the country competed in this contest. The blue ribbon butter of the year has been sold exclusively for many years in A&P stores.

In A&P the best butter makers are sure of a steady customer for their product. Among the food in its stores their butter is sure to find itself in good company.

NO. 3 OF A SERIES OF ADVERTISEMENTS ON THE STORY OF OLIVER TWIST

Original George Cruikshank Illustration through Courtesy of Houghton Mifflin Company

"This is him, Faqin," said Jack Dawkins

Up the creaking stairs of a tumble-down shack in London's underworld at midnight, Oliver followed "The Artful Dodger." His heart was pounding furiously with fear...but he had at least escaped from Sowerberry. He listened to passwords as they fell from his companion's lips. Finally the last door opened...and, blinking in the half-light, Oliver found himself being informally presented to Fagin . . . the red-headed Professor of Pocket-Picking, Teacher of Thieves, in his dirty classroom, surrounded by his pupils. Utterly worn out after seven days' walking without food or sleep, and innocent of the nefarious intentions of his host, Oliver swallowed a glass of warm gin, at Fagin's insistence, and was soon dead to the world!

Club Women Hear Doctor Explain 'Ways in and Out of Nervousness'

The talk on "Ways In and Out of Nervousness," which Dr. George J. Wright gave before the Woman's City Club on Saturday, was intensely interesting and thoroughly enjoyed by the good-sized audience. Dr. Wright opened his address by briefly sketching the history of medicine from the time of Hippocrates to the middle of the last century, when medicine began to make such enormous strides.

It was about 1910, Dr. Wright said, that doctors began to see people in a new way—in the third dimension, the speaker called it—that they began to study how patients felt in connection with their thoughts.

Dr. Wright said all cases must be looked at from three points of development—intelligence, emotions and habits. Too much attention was paid in the past to the purely intelligent side; the amount of knowledge one can acquire is established at birth, he went on, and some people have such definite limitations that it is a waste of time to try to pour a quart of intelligence into a pint capacity. A minus-intelligence, possessed of good habit formations and emotional balance, may be a success, he pointed out, whereas the plus intelligence, lacking the other two, can be a failure.

Dr. Wright cited some especially interesting cases and explained how they had been solved either through modification of conditions or adjustment to conditions. Although nervousness does occur in connection with physical disorders, it is not always structural, he stated. It is usually the strain underneath that causes the trouble and is overlooked and the blame laid on some obvious symptom.

Miss R. Louise Fitch, dean of women at Cornell, who will address the international luncheon of the American Association of University Women at the Schenley Hotel on Saturday, has had a full and varied life. THE SHORT EVENING WRAP SWINGS INTO FAVOR AGAIN

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Feb. 9.—Again we round the cape in the sea of fashion. But the evening cape that we see at the moment is not on long lines or cut on voluminous dimensions. Its proportions are charmingly slim, and its length is but a pleasant whisper. Nevertheless, it is quite definitely a cape and is making appearances at the smartest evening functions. We have seen the cape of fur and also of fabric heavily fur-trimmed. Maybe the longer cape will stage the oft-anticipated revival in the spring, but up to now this is the only version we have seen of it. It is an interesting variant to the short coat or the very long wrap and there is an old-world, picturesque charm about it that makes one pleasantly aware of it. And it is quite good with and suited to the evening frocks seen at the moment, as they, too, are stressing the charm of the styles of other days.

* * *

WE HAVE HAD SKETCHED for this page two lovely capes that should adequately tell the story of the revival and popularity of the short evening cape. The first sketch is of a very smart model that was recently seen at a gala at Ciro's. It is of ivory satin of heavy quality and is shirred heavily over the shoulders and then flared with a crisp, circular movement. It is heavily bordered in silver fox, using the full pelt in a most luxurious fashion. The scarf, forming a collar, is loosely knotted in front.

* * *

AND NOW for the short and quite amusing cape of ermine, surely a pleasant variant from the large or long ermine wrap that has been seen for so long. This cape was sketched in the Theater Danou and was worn by a member of the audience. It is edged with quantities of tiny black ermine tails, and despite its attenuated proportions represented quite a regal aspect. There is no collar and the cape fits very snugly over the shoulders.

VOTE MACHINE ACTION NEAR

Authorization for the readvertising of bids for voting machines is expected at the scheduled meeting of the County Commissioners tomorrow. Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong said the matter would be brought up if the full board meets. Commissioner E. V. Babcock and Commissioner C. C. McGovern are suffering from colds and may not attend.

R. F. Griffin, vice president of the Automatic Vote Machine Corporation, conferred with Armstrong Saturday. His concern lost the award last fall to the Poole Engineering Company of Baltimore, whose contract was voided by the State Supreme Court.

Officers of the redistricting committee declared about 900 districts would have to be equipped with voting machines. In the original specifications the contract called for 1,000 machines, more or less.

PITTSBURGHER SHOT IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(INS.)—Irvine Santainello, 40, and his wife, Ansetta, of Brooklyn, were arrested today in connection with the shooting of John Wagner, 30, a radio salesman, of 16 East Erie street, Pittsburgh.

Wagner is critically wounded with two bullets in his back. Police said Wagner identified the couple as his assailants. They declared Wagner was lured to an apartment, robbed of $55, and wounded in a fight which followed.

RACKET SPLIT ON 'NUMBER'

"Numbers" operators continued today to operate on several different numbers while they scoured the country for some statistic that would assure them a basis on which to gamble and future prosperity.

The temperature bulletin of the United States Weather Bureau attracted more attention as it became evident that the New York Stock Exchange total daily sales unofficial tabulation was not trustworthy. Prominent "bookies" contended they would rather close down than play on that number.

Rumors of an early return of the New York Clearing House daily balances were discounted. It looked as though another week was necessary, at least, before the confusion filtered into uniformity and the racket started to mend.

2 DRY PADLOCKS ORDERED

Two decrees directing padlocking of alleged barrooms were signed today by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in Federal Court.

A decree directing the United States marshal to padlock a barroom on the first floor of a two-story building occupied by the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Aerie No. 693 at 307 Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, as a common nuisance, and a similar decree directed against the Tarentum Mennerchor, at 136 West Ninth street, Tarentum, were signed. Both decrees were for one year.

Ancient Civilization Discovered in Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Evidences of a pre-historic civilization, of which no trace had previously been found in Egypt, have been revealed by excavations at Maadi, a few miles from here, it was announced today.

The discoveries include wooden posts, whose position indicates the dwelling places of these pre-historic Egyptians were oval in shape, quantities of pottery and flint implements, stone tools and millstones.

Arkansas Churches Fight Betting Bill

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Legislative efforts to legalize pari-mutuel betting on horse races, and Sunday baseball in counties of 50,000 population or more will be conducted over the protest of the Lord's Day Alliance of Arkansas, an organization of Protestant churchmen. The Alliance made public today a resolution it has adopted in opposition.

Winter Epidemics

Many Thousands Stricken in Europe and Japan. Now in Eastern United States

If you have a cold knock it out at once. If not then use every protection against colds. They are dangerous.

Each little cold you have leaves a few germs in your system. You may not be aware of it and then are an easy victum of even the mildest epidemics that occur during the winter months.

Millions are now using the famous Pure Herb Laxative Tonic called Bulgarian Herb (Blood) Tea to break up colds quickly and strengthen and fortify the system. The rich juices brewed from these barks, roots, leaves and plants, taken steaming hot at bedtime, are instantly effective.

Prevention leaves no regrets and Bulgarian Herb Tea taken by the whole family at least twice a week will keep you in good physical condition. The cost is small and your druggist will honestly recommend Bulgarian Herb Tea.

HOOVERS PAY LINCOLN HONOR

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—In the church where Abraham Lincoln worshipped, President Hoover heard a plea for a return of the faith and compassion characteristic of the Civil War chief executive.

Departing from his custom of attending the Friends Meeting House, President Hoover went to the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church for its annual Lincoln birthday service.

Sitting in the pew where Lincoln worshipped, the President and Mrs. Hoover heard the pastor, the Rev. Joseph Richard Sizoo, deplore decadence in spiritual, economic and moral realms and assert the "lost radiance of the world" might be returned through faith and compassion.

Alderman Reports 29 Raids in Year

Alderman M. J. Griffin, of Fifth Ward, has announced that during the past year 29 raids were made by Constables Lewis Shiring, Jr., and Carl Rubenstein, of his office. All of the cases reached court, according to the alderman, and 17 resulted in convictions. One forfeited bail, and is being sought by police, three were found not guilty and eight cases are still pending. The raids were principally conducted on alleged lotteries and gambling houses.

OLDEST PLAYER ONLY ONE SURE OF JOB

ONE OF BASEBALL'S odd situations is found in the fact that the oldest infielder in the major leagues is the only player on an entire club who can be said at this time to be sure of his position for the coming season. That's the place of distinction that Rabbit Maranville holds in the plans of the Boston National League club, according to Manager Bill McKechnie. Maranville has turned 38 and has outlasted all other infielders of his time in the big show, yet instead of slowing down and being shunted to the sidelines he looms up as the lone Brave certain to be picked for any particular post in 1931.

Rabbit Maranville

McKechnie announced the Rabbit's position as the only one he felt sure about while discussing the Boston outlook. Of course, he expects to have Walter Berger and Wesley Schulmerich in the outfield, but he hasn't decided just how he will place them. Otherwise, he says, Maranville is the only player on the whole spring squad who can be looked upon as a fixture in any one of the seven regular positions.

WALTER WILL BE told to go slowly while down South and will not be used in many of the exhibition games. One reason is that McKechnie is looking for protection at shortstop for this year and means to make Buster Chatham and Charley Wilson do a lot of playing at the post on the spring trip.

"Anyhow, all that the Rabbit needs in the South is batting practice," added the Wilkinsburg citizen. "He'll get that. He struts on the field the first day down there and is in better physical condition than almost anybody else on the club at the end of the training period. He's the wonder man of baseball right now, that same Rabbit, with his pepper and his ability, and all that fire and color. He is no longer a kid, but he has shown no signs of slipping."

JOE M'CARTHY, Yankee skipper, is picking up an unusual number of old players discarded by other American League clubs. First he took on Catcher Cy Perkins, dropped by the A's, next he signed Infielder Joe Sewell, released by the Indians, and now he has added Pitcher Joe Shaute, another former Cleveland athlete.

Shaute, a left-hander, had a big year in his second season in the big show, 1924, when he won 20 games for the Indians, but in only one campaign after that did he succeed in winning as many games as he lost. Cleveland dropped him last summer and he went to the Southern Association, only to be released this winter. He is a free agent and McCarthy will take him South for a tryout.

A VETERAN RECALLS that when the National League held its schedule meeting 20 years ago at the call of President Tom Lynch the club heads present were Barney Dreyfuss, John T. Brush, Charles H. Ebbets, Horace Fogel, W. Hepburn Russell, C. W. Murphy, Garry Herrmann and E. A. Steininger. Only President Dreyfuss is left. Those attending the American League schedule session in 1911 were Charles Comiskey, Frank Navin, Frank Farrell, Ben Shibe, J. I. Taylor, T. C. Noyes, C. M. Somers and R. L. Hedges. Presidents Comiskey and Navin are the only men still on the job. Three remain out of 16 in the two major loops.

IN STRIKING CONTRAST to many of America's star jockeys who are forced into retirement by increasing weight, Steve Donoghue, Great Britain's greatest riding product, now visiting in this country, doesn't have to worry about that, even at this late stage of his career.

Steve Donoghue

Donoghue told Bill Corum that throughout all his late riding years he had not varied five pounds in weight, and just to prove it he stepped on the scales and tipped the beam at 107½. Remarkable figures after more than a quarter of a century in the saddle, during which he never had to diet.

DISCUSSING the recent severe injury to Sonny Workman, Donoghue was the victim of three serious accidents in the last three years, he recalls. Once both legs were broken, again he suffered a crushed shoulder, and last spring an ankle was fractured.

Donoghue, who has ridden six English Derby winners in 27 years, expects to figure in that famous race again this spring. He is under contract to Sir Victor Sassoon, and the latter is almost certain to have a starter. If he does, Steve will ride it.

THE MOVEMENT TO abolish or curtail spring football practice has not been carried as far as the Pacific Coast. Things bid fair to go along as usual, out there. At least no definite move has yet been made to cut down springtime sessions. California has announced that it is going to hold spring practice, and while no definite statement has come from the other colleges in the Coast Conference, you can imagine what chance there is that Pop Warner, Howard Jones, Tubby Spears, Jim Phelan or Babe Hollingbery will stand by and let a newcomer like Bill Ingram steal a march on them.

HAVING TO UNDERGO an operation for appendicitis is not what would be popularly termed getting a break, but such an experience by one member of the specially appointed commission that recently concluded a lengthy investigation of boxing conditions in California is so viewed by the other committeemen. They say that it saved him money and that he got something for what it cost him.

The member in question was stricken just as the investigation started and was unable to take part in it. The other appointees traveled all over the state, holding meetings and taking testimony to make recommendations to the boxing commission. When their work was finished it was discovered that the whole thing was out of order, that no financial provision had been made for it, and that the state cannot pay the committeemen a penny for their labors, not even for the expenses which they paid out of their own pockets.

SINCE IT WAS announced that the National League clubs, on their spring training trips, would experiment with a new ball having a thicker cover and heavier stitching, whereas the American League outfits would not tamper with the cover but would change only the stitching, it has been rumored that the two leagues might start the 1931 pennant season using different spheres.

According to President Bob Quinn, of the Boston Red Sox, this report is without foundation. He says it would not be convenient for the manufacturers to make two types of baseball, inasmuch as the same machines are used for turning out the pellets used by the two big loops, and predicts that the same ball will be in use in the two circuits when the season opens.

Bob Quinn

QUINN ALSO WANTS to make it clear that the new ball will not have what might be called raised stitching. He says the stitching will be heavier, but not raised, pointing out that the ball must be perfectly round, which it would not be if anything in the material used stood out beyond the true sphere. According to the Red Sox head the stitches must be flush with the cover of the ball. He admits, however, that the heavier stitching will mean that the stitch holes will be farther apart, making it possible for a s[illegible]g fingered pitcher to get a better grip on the ball and thus put more stuff on it to baffle the batsmen, the result being more effective pitching and consequently less slugging than in recent years.

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS

By CARL W. SHATTO.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 9.—The Yellow Jackets, battered and bruised after gaining a victory and a tie in two successive nights of International League hockey competition, were sore of body but cheerful in spirit as they made ready to return to their Duquesne Garden home today.

After getting back into the title race by handing Syracuse a 5-1 defeat at Pittsburgh Saturday night, the Schooley skaters further enhanced their chances of getting into the playoffs by battling the Cleveland Indians, International League defending champions, to a 1-1 deadlock in an overtime fray at the Elysium here last night.

The Jackets are to meet the Indians at Duquesne Garden, Pittsburgh, tomorrow night, and the manner in which the Steel City puckmen outplayed the Champs in gaining their deadlock last night prompted the belief that the Jackets' first triumph over the Indians is just around the corner.

'BREAKS' AGAINST JACKETS

In holding the titleholders even here the Schooley icemen tallied on a difficult scoring chance and passed up several fine opportunities to dent the Cleveland mesh. In about the fourth minute of play in the first period Tex White lifted the puck over the cage when he had an open goal for a target, and late in the third period Halliday passed up the hero role when, after he had received a pass at the Cleveland goal mouth, he was unable to get the puck under control because of rough ice.

In the second stanza Leo Reise slipped the puck under Alex Wood, Cleveland goalie, only to have it stop a couple inches from the goal line, and Rodden, McCurry, Fraser and McGuire forced Wood to perform feats of magic to prevent tallies.

Both the Cleveland and Pittsburgh goals were registered in the first period. Young tallied for the Indians at 8:57 on a solo dash when the Jackets attacked in a five-man wave and left Albie Cox unprotected. McIntyre and Reise engineered the Pittsburgh goal at 18:55 on an extremely fast play, Lloyd converting on a hard but accurate pass from Leo.

McCURRY HURT

Hundreds of Pittsburgh fans who accompanied their favorites here saw the Jackets' faster and more spirited attack give them a big edge in scoring opportunities, and they are confident that this stronger attack will carry the home forces to victory tomorrow.

Duke McCurry was the only casualty in last night's hard fray. He suffered a badly cut mouth, but remained in action.

In order that his men might get all possible rest, President and Manager Roy D. Schooley put 'em up at a local hotel last night and passed up the customary "sleeper jump" home. The lineup:

Wood	G	Cox
Young	D	Reise
McFarlane	D	Fraser
Gray	C	Rodden
Doraty	W	Gregg
Clark	W	McCurry

Referee—Mike Rodden, Toronto.
Overtime—No scoring. No penalties.

LOCAL POLO TEAM WINS

YOUNGSTOWN, Feb. 9.—The Mill Creek Riding Club polo team defeated the 308th Cavalry trio, of Pittsburgh, yesterday afternoon at the local indoor arena, 23½ to 16. Ken Rode, Mill Creek No. 2, thrilled the fans with some spectacular ridi[illegible] and shotmaking.

The Cleveland equestrian team will appear at Mill Creek Sunday and the Pittsburgh 107th Infantry team on February 22. The lineup:

Mill Creek		Pittsburgh
[illegible]	1	Muzuzzan
[illegible] Rode	2	Maddox
[illegible]	3	Perry

Goals—Mill Creek, Rode 13, Wirk 2, Cochran 5, Bony 3; Pittsburgh, Maddox 8, Muzuzzan 7, Perry 1. Referee — George Greenfield, Cleveland.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF SATURDAY: H. B. SMYTHE HAS UNDERGONE 148 MAJOR OPERATIONS—I have the history of Smythe's long suffering from osteomalacia (softening of the bones) and the record of his operations from his own lips. Smythe, accompanied by his surgeon, called on me during my recent stay in St. Louis. He is now entirely cured and enjoying life to the full and his jovial appearance belies the many years of suffering. THE AMERICAN EAGLE IS A RANK COWARD—When Congress decided upon the baldheaded eagle as the national emblem of this country in 1782, Benjamin Franklin was greatly chagrined. He had been sponsoring the turkey as a true native of America, and, in his letter to the Society of Cincinnati, dwelt at length on the bald eagle's inferiority. In comparison, he said: "The turkey is a much more respectful bird, which will not hesitate to courageously attack a red coat entering its yard." (Reference: "History of the Seal of the United States," issued by the Department of State in 1909, page 65.) JOE BANKS HAS MET 1,113,000 TRAINS AND NEVER RIDDEN ON ONE—Joe Banks, who met my train recently in St. Louis, states that during the past 15 years he has met an average of 200 trains a day in the Union Station, but never has ridden on one. In performing his duties of porter, he estimates he has walked 194,775 miles, has met 166,950 passengers and carried 500,850 pieces of baggage.

Having demonstrated to the princes and the principalities of the basketball realm that a ball game never is over until the very last tick of the very last second had passed into eternity (I love that) by raking out a 35-32 triumph over Notre Dame Saturday night, the noble Pitt Panthers, who never were more noble than they are today, are graciously accepting the congratulations due 'em.

It's an old theory, that one, about the ball game not being over until the last man is out, or until the last whistle has tooted or the last gun cracked. Notre Dame, in seeking revenge for a 28-20, extra period setback suffered at the hands of the Panthers in South Bend some two or three weeks ago, thought it had the old ball game in the Stadium Saturday evening safely iced, when, with only 25 seconds of play remaining, they were out in front by a 30-26 score.

SENSATIONAL WIN

But the last man wasn't out, and that last man, Mister Timothy Lawry, of the North Side, bagged himself two rapid fire goals to tie the score and then, in the extra period, flipped another to establish the Panthers in a lead they never relinquished.

Pitt's sensational triumph and Lawry's brilliant individual performance were the outstanding features of last week's college campaign in this territory. The victory made it four in a row for Pitt over the Irish and 13 out of 16 for this season. The win also was the seventh in succession, the locals not having been beaten since Indiana took down a win here New Year's night.

Bethany and Geneva compiled the most sparkling records for the week's play, both playing and winning two important games, Bethany hammered out decisive triumphs over West Virginia and Wash-Jeff, the triumph over the Presidents Saturday night being the second of the season to be recorded at the expense of the staggering Wash-Jeffers.

Geneva rang up a pair of fine wins over extremely formidable rivals, getting a brace of wins that will serve to do the Covenanters a lot of good. First, Ken Loeffler's charges riddled Grove City's Crimson and then, before a capacity crowd, man-handled the Dukes here Friday night. The two triumphs boosted the Genevians above the .500 class.

THIEL 'GATORS BREAK EVEN

Thiel and Allegheny both broke even in two games. The Lutherans walloped Waynesburg but lost to Grove City Saturday night. Allegheny took the Yellow Jackets and gave Westminster a great scrap before succumbing.

Waynesburg, like Wash-Jeff, lost both starts. The Presidents bowed to Pitt Tuesday night.

Bethany, with eight consecutive wins out of as many starts, is away far ahead, with Pitt trailing along with three victories and no defeats in games played with sectional rivals. The Bisons and Panthers alone are unbeaten in the section.

West Virginia found the going tougher than ever, and was sunk by both Benthany and Washington and Lee. Penn State, strange to say, finally won one, bumping off Western Maryland with surprising grace Saturday night.

West Virginia opens a tough week of campaigning tonight in Washington, D. C., clashing with Georgetown. Tomorrow the Mountaineers play Temple at Philadelphia, Wednesday they take on the Navy at Annapolis and Thursday return to Morgantown for a one-night stand with a return game with Georgetown. Friday they are idle and Saturday they'll meet Penn State at State College.

Yale Will Name New Coaches Today

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Yale athletic officials declined to comment on the announcement by Bucky O'Connor, former Notre Dame fullback, in Pittsburgh, that he and Benny Friedman, former Michigan star, have been engaged as assistant football coaches at Yale. The Elis' coaching staff for next season they said, will not be announced until after the meeting of the board of control of the Athletic Association today.

CHARTIERS CLUB DINES ROBB

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Members of the Chartiers Heights Country Club tonight will pay tribute to a real friend, A. Don Robb, who has just concluded nine years' service as president of the beautiful club atop Thornburg Heights. Through storm and strife Robb has guided the destinies of Chartiers Heights, and now that his work in putting the club "over the top" has been completed, he has stepped out of the picture as chief executive and will take orders from a new one.

In showing their appreciation in a material way, Robb's closest friends in his steady fight to put Chartiers Heights on a solid foundation, the board of directors, have procured a fitting gift which will be presented.

Tee to Green

S. M. Lynch, prominent member of the Youghiogheny Country Club, soon will make his annual winter trip to Georgia and Florida. At this time, he is active in directing winter work on the Youghiogheny grounds.

Youghiogheny plans on holding a number of tournaments this summer. Tom Bennett, veteran professional and greenkeeper, is remodeling two holes on the second nine at the McKeesport Club, but they will not be opened until next year.

Stanley Herr, local St. Mungo dealer, has been vacationing in San Antonio, participating in Texas tournaments.

Frank Walker, St. Clair star and well-known all-around local links, soon may open a big indoor golf club, with a pitch-and-drive course, nets and whatnot. His plans will interest a number of local golfers.

HANDBALL PLAY TODAY

Play in the annual Junior Allegheny Mountain Association handball championship was scheduled to get under way at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the courts of the P. A. A., East Liberty Y. M. C. A., Y. M. H. A., P. A. A. and Downtown Y. are represented.

SPORT VIGNETTES

The death yesterday of young Robert Cranshaw, the Negro boxer, of Columbus, O., as an aftermath of his brutal beating in a bout with Marty Gornick, of McKeesport, in the Moose Temple, a little more than a week ago, emphasizes the need of stricter supervision of bouts in which virtual novices are participants . . . Nothing was known here of Cranshaw or his record in the ring, if any, but he was passed for an opening bout against an opponent of more than passing ability, and, poorly trained, was permitted to carry on throughout the six rounds when it was apparent a few moments after the opening bell that he was outclassed and didn't have a chance . . . His jaw was broken and his teeth were jarred loose early and blood spurted from his gashed mouth, yet no move was made either by the referee or his seconds to halt the battle . . . When it was over it was necessary for the commission physician to bind the boxer's jaw and order him to the hospital.

Cranshaw suffered in great pain during the more than a week that he survived, almost friendless and neglected, while an investigation was begun to determine who, if anyone, could be made to pay his hospital bill . . . There was talk of holding a benefit show to defray this cost.

Asked why he had not given up himself, the unfortunate youth said he needed his share of the $20 purse to keep himself going and was afraid he would not be paid if he were knocked out or decided to quit . . . A few nights later, a semi-final bout at Motor Square Garden was stopped in the first round when an experienced boxer was being punched around by Indian Tiger West, but was in nothing like the dangerous condition of the novice, Cranshaw, fighting on through sheer nerve, with his jaw fractured and his features cut and hammered to a pulp, for a meager purse . . . The semi-final boxer benefited from the official fear engendered by Cranshaw's fate . . . Why should it be necessary for novices to be fatally hurt in the ring before the authorities take steps to protect ringmen? . . . The poor Negro boy had no protection from either his opponent or his own grim determination to stick it out for the few dollars that meant so much to him . . . He was cruelly sacrificed on the altar of indifference and his death is a black mark against the records of the officials whose negligence and incompetency permitted the tragedy.

Writing of the bout at the time, this writer said: "Marty Gornick, of McKeesport, handed out a bad beating to Bob Cranshaw, Negro, of the Hill, in the six-round opener, with the result that the latter had to be taken to the Passavant Hospital after the bout for treatment for a broken jaw. He also lost several teeth and was badly cut and battered. The towel should have been thrown in for him during the early rounds, when it was apparent he was hopelessly outclassed."

A few lines in yesterday's newspapers told of the death in the Crile Clinic in Cleveland of Charles Crow, 58, former manager of the Sharon club in the old O.

RODGERS, DATTO BOTH SEEK KAYO TONIGHT

HARD HITTERS IN RETURN BATTLE

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Two "killers" of the ring—meaning, of course, deadly punchers—do their stuff in a return bout in the windup at Motor Square Garden tonight.

They are Johnny Datto, Filipino, of Cleveland, and Jackie Rodgers, local Negro featherweight star. They first met last New Year's night, with Datto winning the decision in 10 rounds, after just missing scoring a knockout in the second round, when he had Rodgers on the floor four times.

Rodgers, who had been out of action for several months because of an eye injury just prior to boxing Datto on that occasion after several other matches arranged between them had fallen through, believes he knows how to handle Datto after his close call in that other meeting, and is confident of victory tonight, while Datto, who claims he injured his right hand in that early splurge and thus was prevented from finishing the job of 'knocking out his opponent, says he will not fail if he gets Rodgers on Queer street again tonight. Rodgers himself hopes for a knockout conquest.

The fans are divided in their opinions of the merits of the rivals, and, as a result, the Garden, which will be closed to boxing for two weeks because of the food show after tonight's offering, will be jammed to the walls. The rematch is one of the naturals of the season for the bugs. Rodgers and Datto, along with the other boxers on the card, will weigh in at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Garden gym.

That rarest of fistic things, a battle between two southpaws, will be on tap in the eight-round semi-final tonight. It brings together Marcus Nole, local Negro middleweight, and Tony LaRose, of Cincinnati. LaRose is a fast-moving boxer and Nole a damaging body puncher with his left, who, in his most recent appearance in the Garden, got up off the floor to knock out Jack Tracey, another local Negro thumper.

Carl Montebano, of Braddock, and Joe Zemon, of Cleveland, box the second bout, and Jimmy Reilly of McKeesport, and Jackie Coogan, of Canton, O., subbing for Bus Hardy, of Beaver Falls, are in the opener at 8:30.

Between Rounds

Promoter Ray Eberle, of Aliquippa, stages an amateur show of eight bouts in the Rialto Theater there tomorrow night. A Golden Gloves amateur tourney will be held in the Palisades ring, McKeesport, Wednesday and Thursday nights, and the H. T. Little Club, of Homestead, will offer an amateur card in Sokol Hall on Friday.

The Moose fans will welcome back Billy Rose, of Cincinnati, for his 10-round windup with Billy Holt, Homewood's hard-hitting young Negro welterweight, Friday night. Following Rose's recent brilliant showing in beating Jimmy Kelly, of the North Side, in the same arena, Hal Murray and Al Ghan box the semi-final, and Sammy Burns and George DeBasi mix in the second bout.

Father James R. Cox, of Old St. Patrick's Church, today issued an itemized account of the receipts and expenditures of his benefit boxing show for his relief fund, held in the Moose Temple last Wednesday night. It showed receipts of $982, with $26 still outstanding, rental, printing and other expenses and 5 per cent tax to the State Athletic Commission amounting to $220.80, and a net profit of $741.20. Boxers and officials of the show will be the guests of Father Cox at the church at 6 o'clock tomorrow evening.

An amateur boxing show and vaudeville entertainment will be held for the relief of the unemployed of the Lincoln avenue district under the auspices of the Linwood A. C. and the Twenty-eighth Signal Corps in the Penn Armory Friday evening.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN,
The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XXV.

After Rickard had made a private agreement with Jess Willard for the meeting with Frank Moran, Jess began to jack up Tex a bit.

I found this out, and, in order to keep Jess from running away with all of the earnings, I made a dicker with Tex. Moran must have half of what he was to pay Jess. That's why Tex gave me that extra $2,500 for being a nice little boy and stringing along with him. In reality, he was giving me just half of what he was paying Jess, for the big fellow finally had been promised a guarantee of $55,000.

Carl Morris

I told Tex it might be a good thing to accept an offer for Moran that I had received to go to Tulsa, Okla., and fight Carl Morris. Carl once had fought Jess and was blustering around about not getting a chance at the title.

Tex wasn't very strong about taking the chance. He knew Carl was as big as Williard and little Francis Charles might be snowed under.

MATCHED WITH MORRIS

I didn't think so, and Tex finally gave his consent. It would drum up trade, he thought, and Moran and I started off for Tulsa, where Morris was king. We didn't expect to get any the better of the breaks and were on the lookout for pitfalls. I was tickled pink at getting Moran away from New York as it was. He had been playing the night clubs and there is no real training in those dumps. Many a good fighter has found that out and more will find it out as time romps along.

As soon as we landed in Tulsa, our trouble began. Moran started it himself by purchasing a new Ford car. The first night he had it he drove into town from the farm house we had picked out as the training spot.

Moran went in to see the moving pictures, leaving the car in the street, when he came out, dear li'l Lizzy was gone. Moran, always an explosive fellow and a Burke Cochran when riled, got right out in the midle of the street and delivered an oration on the low-lived, sneaking thievery of Tulsa, its beastly climate and its punk contender for the heavyweight title.

MORAN IN TROUBLE

Our Frank made himself so popular, then and there! Invading to whip the town's white-haired boy was bad enough, but to tell those gaunt cowboys, their gells and the populace in general that they were a lot of black legs was inviting the hangman's noose. And, to cap it, the Hon. Francis Charles Moran, orator extraordinary, accused the police of Tulsa of being in on the theft of his Lizzy.

Well, I know we were gone, but that was Moran. Getting the car back now was a matter of 1000 to 1 and no takers. Just the same, money was pouring into the coffers of the fellows promoting the bout.

Red Sammy McClintock, one time manager of Spider Welsh, whose knockout at the hands of Bat Nelson first brought the Durable Dane into prominence, and Otto Zeigler, the oldttime bike rider, were the promoters. They were buying the lumber and fixtures for the open-air bout as the money came in. Each night the carpenters lined up in the hotel to get their pay. That didn't look good. It wasn't according to Hoyle and I began to regret our little warm-up plan. And as for the fight, I knew that Morris would lay in a foul blow the first chance he got. That was his way of winning fights and he had a cinch in his own town. I began to scout around for a referee who would give us a break. Red Sammy was a good friend of mine, even if he was one of the promoters.

SHERIFF BANS FIGHT

He told me that if I went to some little town, I've forgotten the name, between Tulsa and Kansas City, I'd find Rube Ferns, the old welterweight champion of years ago. If Ferns refereed, all the guns and cutthroats in Tulsa wouldn't intimidate him. We found the Rube. We laid our cards on the table. He saw our plight at once and promised to come in and referee the fight.

"Morris won't fool me," said Rube. "I don't like foul fighters. The first time he hits Moran on the belt line I'll disqualify him and I'll tell him so beforehand," said Rube.

That same morning, the sheriff met Moran doing his roadwork. The sheriff was on horseback and rode right up onto Moran's heels. Putting his hand on his cannister, he bawled out good and loud:

"See here, Mister. This here fight isn't going to take place. We ain't a goin' to allow it, and, if you as much as poke your nose in that arena on July 4, I'll make Swiss cheese of you and throw you into jail. That goes."

"It goes double," said Moran. "I was invited out here to fight. Inasmuch as I now am being invited to scram, I'll do that, too. Have no lurking fear, sheriff, I'm off instanter."

HELD UP BY GEYER

We went back to the hotel, and if you ever saw two bright young men preparing for the going when the good was good, it was Francis Charles Moran and your Old Sobersides.

I had just packed my extra pair of socks when in walked the same sheriff, only uglier than before. This time he had "them thar papers." It was an attachment on our baggage.

A sparring partner, Jock Geyer, was holding us up for back pay. He had been so hopelessly punk that we had fired him the first day. After the first round, in fact, and he wanted to collect in full for two weeks. Moran boiled over. He threatened to take the guns away from the sheriff. Our trainer had Geyer against the wall, guzzling him. I picked up a shyster lawyer in the lobby and settled the claim for one-half of the amount demanded. We threw kisses to the Oklahoma border line as we crossed it.

We came back to New York and got down to serious training for Willard. Frank had made a great impression on Tex. He liked him.

Moran was full of romance. He was stuck on a little Irish girl and she flew the coop when he began training. He was like a wounded Bengal tiger when he learned about it. We had brought back a Negro boxer from Tulsa, one that we thought would amount to something. When he appeared with the gloves on that day, Moran told him to take them off.

"I've got too much animal in me today. I'm liable to kill you," said the great lover.

Moran went at the only other sparring partner and we had to pull him off. He would have slaughtered him.

That night, driving into town from camp, Moran was at the wheel of a new Apperson Jackrabbit that he had purchased. A trolley car motorman tried to cut in front of him, and Moran, with a curse, pinned his foot to the gas and charged full speed ahead right at the trolley car, trying to knock it off the track. I never saw such a wreck in my life.

That night, I called in Tex. It was time to order a halt. Tex talked to Moran like a father.

"Git the money first, son, and worry about your love affairs afterwards," said Tex.

PALS TO HONOR SQUASH TITLE RUNNER-UP

Ben Pope, pro at the Keystone A. C., returned home today from Boston, where last week he battled his way through to the final round of the national professional squash racquets tournament before bowing to Jack Summers, professional at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the defending champion.

Arrangements are being made by friends of Pope to hold a testimonial dinner in his honor as a reward for his fine showing and the prestige it brought his home club.

Summers was loud in his praise of Pope's skill at the conclusion of their match, and in a long-distance conversation with Harry Hainsworth, athletic director of the Keystone A. C., said he would like to come here in the near future to play an exhibition match with Pope.

"More Miles per Gallon"

says Prof. McKERGOW of McGILL UNIVERSITY after exclusive tests of five leading motor fuels

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The results given in the table below are based on a series of tests made on a six cylinder Marmon engine in the Mechanical Engineering Laboratory of McGill University, Montreal.

Five samples of gasoline were submitted for test. Each had a distinguishing letter only and could not be identified by us while the tests were being carried out.

As Blue Sunoco Motor Fuel sells at 3¢ a gallon cheaper than 3 of the other gasolines submitted, it is undoubtedly the most economical of the fuels tested both with regards to cost and miles per gallon of gasoline.

Gals. Gasoline used to obtain same H.P.Hours as "D"	Brand of Gasoline	Cost per Gallon	Cost of fuel consumed to obtain same H.P. Hours. (Compared with "D")
	("D") Blue
100	Sunoco	29¢	$29.00
101.5	"C"	32¢	32.50
102	"A"	32¢	32.60
103.6	"E"	32¢	33.10
103.8	"B"	29¢	30.10

Respectfully submitted,

GALLATIN ELEVEN COPS MON-YOUGH TITLE

Rockne Won't Quit, Friedman May Not Go to Yale, Kiser, Here, Says

SECANE'S TEAM EASILY BEATS ELIZABETH

YESTERDAY'S SCORES
MON-YOUGH LEAGUE
Gallatin ... Fitz-Henry ...

INDEPENDENT
Moon Run ... Crystal Rovers ...

By TOM BIRKS.

The pennant of the Mon-Yough Soccer League was nailed to the mast by Gallatin yesterday when Secane and his undefeated eleven traveled to Elizabeth to defeat Brancolini's team, 4 goals to 1. Gallatin needed two points prior to the game to sew up the binting, and by scoring all of its markers in the first half, the result never was in doubt.

One thing was impressive and that was the fine spirit that predominates the Elizabeth team. After watching teams fight like wildcats, it was a relief to find a beaten team that did not want to clean up on the referee.

Manager Brancolini says his team likes to win but that is secondary to the social part of the game. Elizabeth has finished a schedule without winning a game, and it takes a real team to do that.

GALLATIN SCORES EARLY

With the pennant at stake the Brown and White of Gallatin soon made tracks towards Balogh, and Frankie Bost smashed the ball into the net without the Elizabeth goalie having a chance. Elizabeth fought back hard but Richardson, one of the real soccer veterans, kept the ball in the home team's goal mouth with some delightful and powerful kicking. Before the interval was reached Harrison and Trusca added goals.

The muddy field stopped all attempts at scientific soccer. The lone Elizabeth tally came in the second half when Pellegrini smashed the ball past Lot to Gallatin is due to the start of the upriver title. The lineup:

Gallatin — Elizabeth 4
Lorenzi ... Baloga
Bailey ... Patterson
Richardson ... Arrigo
Rapp ... Gallo
Chiolog ... Dalessio
Pascarelli ... Pascarelli
Lenzi ... Gallo
Trusca ... Pellegrini
Harrison ... Dalvi
Secane ... Smith
Broggi ... Brancolini
Goals—Pellegrini, Broggi, Trusca, Harrison. Referee—O'Connor.

MATHER BEATEN

Three other battles were contested yesterday, one of them in which Fitz-Henry bumped Mather, 3 to 1, also being in the Mon-Yough circuit.

In independent tilting, Moon Run walloped Piney Fork, 4-1, at Moon Run, and the Crystal Rovers whipped German Unity, 5 to 1.

and P. League. . . . . The announcement stirred the memories of many Pittsburgh men who played with or against Crow in the early years of the present century. . . . Crow was a native of Fayette County, a pitcher who made his mark in the old Central League. . . . Later he settled in Niles, O., where he entered business and was elected mayor three times. . . . Many Pittsburghers played for him, including Diggs Ortleib, catcher, of the North Side, who has been dead about 10 years; Pitchers Bill Glassburner, Lefty Kummer and Lefty Boyle; Shortstop Charley DeMoss, of the North Side; Third Baseman Red Nagle, of East Liberty, and Catcher Frank Piper, of the North Side. . . . Second Baseman Claude Gouzzie, of Monessen, now dead, also played for him. . . . . Other contemporaries were Marty Hogan, now dead, who managed the Ohio Works team, of Youngstown, one of the best in the district; Jimmy Breen, of Ashtabula, manager of the Warren (O.) team, which started Pitcher Leon Ames on his way to the New York Giants; Hump Badle, of the Warren team; Don McKim, Braddock manager, and Frank Haller, manager of Waynesburg and later a scout for the Pirates. Washington, Pa., also boasted a good team in those days, around 1903-1906.

The Niles team managed by Crow after he settled there was one of the best for miles around and played big league as well as minor league opponents. . . . In one game Piper completed the job of wrecking the day for Earl Moore, pitching for Cleveland, by hitting a home run over the fence with a couple of mates on the bases. . . . Some years later, Crow met Pitcher Boyle, and, when the latter commented on the fact that his old boss had become gray-haired, Crow retorted, "Yes, and you put the gray hairs there with your wild and woolly pitching. Oh, will I ever be able to forget those many bases on balls?" . . . During the land boom in Florida, Crow, wealthy, went there to reside. . . . Yes, Charley Crow merits more than a few lines in the papers on his passing to new fields, where wild southpaw pitchers cannot disturb his dreams.—HARRY KECK.

PURDUE COACH ARRIVES FOR BANQUET

Noble Kizer doesn't think Knute Rockne, famous Notre Dame football coach, will give up coaching very soon, despite rumors to the contrary, and he is certain that Rock will never take a coaching job at another school.

Kizer, former Notre Dame line star and at present head coach of football at Purdue University, is visiting in Pittsburgh today for the expressed purpose of speaking at the annual dinner of the Purdue Alumni Association at the P. A. A. at 6:45 tonight.

There is a possibility, according to Kizer, that Frank Carideo, all-America quarterback at Notre Dame last year and in 1929, now first assistant at Purdue, will return to his alma mater in a year or so as an assistant coach.

"Rock doesn't plan to quit coaching very soon," Kizer said, "but it is certain that he is going to delegate more and more of his actual field work to assistants. He has Chevney handling the backs now, with Hunk Anderson working the line, and Ike Voedisch drilling the ends."

"Carideo has signed a one-year contract at Purdue and whether he'll be back for 1932 or not remains to be seen. It may be that Rockne will bring him back to Notre Dame later on."

Commenting on the situation at Yale, Kizer said that he understood that Benny Friedman, the former Michigan all-America quarterback, might not join the Eli staff, contrary to published reports. Bucky O'Connor, the Irish fullback who ran South California ragged on the coast last year, is to be backfield coach, with Adam Walsh, Notre Dame's famous all-America center, serving as assistant to Mel Stevens. JESS CARVER.

JOCK GOES EAST

Dr. Jock Sutherland, head coach of football at Pitt, will leave for Asbury Park, N. J., Thursday evening, where he will attend the annual winter meeting of the football rules committee. Coach Sutherland is a member of the advisory committee of coaches.

Troops Faced Hardships Of Winter With Clothing Lacking, Says Pershing

ing, and presented figures on the subject that were very disturbing

Reserve Created

But the council's scheme was cut and dried. The recommendations set forth in the note were adopted then and there by the council. The general reserve was created and its control was placed under an executive war board to consist of Gens. Foch representing the French, chairman; Bliss, the Americans; Cadorna, the Italians, and a British general officer to be named.

Gen. Bliss.

At this meeting Mr. Lloyd George designated Gen. Sir Henry Wilson as the British representative, to the very evident disappointment of Gen. Robertson, who was present at the session. The selection of Wilson was regarded by the British high command and the war office as open disapproval of their conduct of the war.

In accordance with the decision of the executive war board, as the administrative authority of the supreme war council, sent out instructions directing the French and British commanders-in-chief each to select a certain number of divisions to form a part of the general reserve. The number was finally fixed at 30 in all; 10 British, 13 French and seven Italian.

The use of these reserves appeared somewhat indefinite, but the idea as brought out in the discussion seemed to be that certain divisions in each army would be designated as constituting a general reserve, to be so situated that they could be moved expeditiously to the support of the army seriously attacked, as might be determined after consultation between the Executive War Board and the Commander-in-Chief of the army affected.

Objections Found

This plan of the Supreme War Council did not meet with the approval of the armies, especially the British, who apparently regarded it as merely an indirect means of assuming supreme command.

One other matter somewhat linked up with this question of a general reserve was the proportion of line that should be held by the French and British armies.

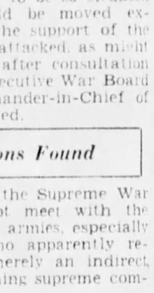
The French argued that they were holding a greater proportion of line than the British, but the latter contended that a large part of the French front was inactive and did not require many troops, while the British front was active. After considerable discussion the question was referred to the military representatives on the council for an opinion.

Their recommendation was not acceptable to the French, so the matter was finally decided by agreement between Gen. Petain and Field Marshal Haig, under which the British were to extend their front some 28 miles, to a point near Barisis. This concession was used later by Sir Douglas Haig as one reason why he could not spare divisions for the general reserve.

Under date of February 4, 1918, I wrote Secretary Baker:

"I'm sending this letter by Gen. March, giving a brief report of the negotiations concerning the troops to be brought over by the British and trained with their divisions.



Gen. March

"After fully considering the matter I am quite convinced that it would be unwise for us to break up divisions by turning over infantry battalions, as such, for extended service with the British. The main reasons are set forth in my memorandum cabled to the department, copy of which is enclosed herewith.

"I am also enclosing two other memoranda, one a conversation with Marshal Joffre, which I would request be held in the strictest confidence, and another giving a synopsis of a conference held between ourselves and the British on the subject of their request for men.

"From the former it will be seen that the Marshal takes the same view that I do regarding service with the British. He further does not look upon the situation on the Western Front with quite so much alarm as is indicated in statements by Marshal Haig and Gen. Petain.

Views Approved

"One more word regarding this discussion. Gen. Bliss, upon his arrival, was inclined to accede to the British request, basing his action upon the cable he received from the Chief of Staff, which stated that the proposition had my approval, although I had not intended to convey that impression.

"After further conference with him, in which I set forth the views of Marshal Joffre and similar views of a British officer of high rank, given me in confidence, Gen. Bliss agreed with me, and we appeared before Mr. Lloyd George in full accord. My views were then fully set forth and were afterward declared by Mr. Lloyd George to be entirely sound.

"The Supreme War Council has been in session since last Tuesday, during which time the whole subject of the conduct of the war has been discussed in its different phases. Generally speaking, the meeting was a success, and the utmost harmony finally prevailed. Personally, I am pleased with the outlook for military co-operation. We are at some disadvantage on the diplomatic side in the Council.

"I stated to Mr. House when he was here that I thought he should be our representative. He undoubtedly has the confidence of the allied governments and would add great strength to the Supreme Council. I see by the dispatches that Mr. Lane has also been suggested.

Mr. Lane

"Gen. March is returning to America as you requested. He will be difficult to replace, but I feel that you need the best man we can find, so I cheerfully let him go. He is in touch with plans, organization and progress here and understands the situation very well."

It has been said that the winter of 1917-18 was the most severe of the war. The cold was at times so intense as to make the generally unheated houses, barns and lofts used as billets nearly uninhabitable. The gloom of short days and long nights in the isolated and largely depopulated French villages can hardly be described.

The snow was unusually heavy in Eastern France, and periodical thaws, with consequent mud and slush in the trenches and dugouts, greatly added to the discomfort of the men of all armies.

Short of Clothing

Training in the open was often impossible for days, and under the conditions even the regular supply of necessary food and men in the trenches became a formidable task. Restricted areas in village streets were kept cleared for daily exercises only by the constant work of troops. The northeastern part of France, while beautiful in summer, is certainly sombre and unattractive in winter.

As to fuel, the natural tendency of all troops, but especially Americans, under such conditions was to use an excessive amount. Nothing delights our soldiers more than to gather around a rousing fire either in or out of doors. But the allowance of firewood was limited and there was no such thing in France as stealing the top rail from fences, as our troops did in the Civil War.

Many units had to go into the forests and cut their own wood, and the winter was well along before our forestry troops got to the point of keeping up the supply.

Then, as we have seen, there was also a shortage of heavy winter clothing, although frequent cables early in the fall had called attention to the probability of a deficiency. No doubt the demands were greater than the Quartermaster Department could meet, but the relatively small number of troops in France going through the winter under actual war conditions should have been given first consideration.

Much of the clothing that we received for our troops looked to be shoddy, and being light and thin of course offered insufficient protection.

Use British Uniforms

The deficiencies were met in part by purchases from the British, although our men did not take kindly to the idea of wearing the uniform of another nation, and it was with considerable protest and chagrin that they did so until our own could be supplied.

I recall an incident that occurred in one of the regiments of infantry which was composed largely of Irish-Americans. This organization had received a consignment of British uniforms with brass buttons, which, of course, bore the coat of arms of Great Britain. When the uniforms were issued a wave of opposition swept through the outfit against wearing British buttons.

To pacify the objectors an automobile was sent post haste with American buttons, the changes were made, and the regiment then turned out looking both smart and serene.

The necessity for haste in preparation, as well as the maintenance of morale, made it necessary to carry out our program of training almost regardless of the weather, and even though it entailed some hardships the constant outdoor life kept the troops in good health and hardened them for the work ahead.

To the credit of our officers and men be it said that they generally ignored adverse conditions, and, barring some irritation at French methods and occasionally at our own, they kept at their tasks with commendable determination. Looking back over the different phases of the war I regard that winter, with its difficulties, anxieties and apprehension for the future, as the most trying period of them all.

Soft Coal Output Declines in Week

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Total production of soft coal during the week ended January 31, including lignite and coal coked at the mines, is estimated at 8,061,000 net tons by the Bureau of Mines. Compared with the output in the preceding week, this shows a decrease of 774,000 tons. Production during the same week in 1930 amounted to 11,628,000 tons.

British Rubber Stocks Increase

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Stocks of crude rubber on February 7 totaled 81,163 tons, an increase of 124 tons over the preceding week.

Greater Knowledge of Fixed Trusts Needed

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

FOR TWO YEARS the fixed investment trust idea has been sweeping the financial world. It has become one of the major attractions for investment funds and has been the salvation of many investment banking houses whose normal markets were destroyed by the break in stock prices and the tardy recovery of bonds.

While fixed trusts secured their first foothold early in 1929, their greatest development has taken place since the stock market crash. Investors were thoroughly sold on the advantages of diversification during 1928 and 1929 when management trusts were at the height of their popularity. There was a natural swing of investors to this new type which gave the advantages of diversification and eliminated some of the unsatisfactory features of its predecessors after the break in the market discredited management trusts.

While there has been a widespread neglect of individual stocks and bonds, the public reception of fixed trusts has been enthusiastic. At present more than 100 trusts of this new type are on the market. The sales of one trust alone have exceeded $150,000,000.

Public Knowledge Lacking

AS NEW FIXED TRUSTS have been organized many changes and refinements have been made. At present there are several distinct types of fixed trusts which operate in widely varying ways. In addition to this, competitive conditions have been responsible for reductions in the charges to investors. The information published on some of the original issues was misleading. This condition is gradually being corrected but there is still room for improvement.

But the truly surprising feature about fixed trusts is the lack of public knowledge concerning the various types and the ways in which they function. Talks with investors and with salesmen for investment houses have shown that a great majority of the individuals putting their money into fixed trusts do not understand exactly what they are buying, the proportion of their money actually put to work or the charges made for assembling the trusts.

Theory Sound

THE GENERAL THEORY underlying the formation of fixed trusts is perfectly sound. There is nothing wrong about any of the recognized fixed trusts providing the buyers are told exactly what they are paying for and what they are getting. In the past some of the originating houses were inclined to be careless about telling all the facts. The sales circulars of one of the large trusts have been changed more than 20 times. This indicates that an attempt is being made to present complete information to buyers.

There is still evidence that the investment public needs technical education about fixed trusts so that it can understand how its money is being used and what fixed trusts give the greatest advantages.

To Study Trusts

A STUDY OF INVESTMENT trusts explaining the underlying theories and the advantages and disadvantages of various kinds will be made in a series of articles to appear from day to day in this column.

Discussion of the general types of fixed trusts will be followed by analyses of some of the most widely known individual trusts. Tomorrow's article will compare the features of management trusts and fixed trusts after which the cumulative, distributive and enhancement types of fixed trusts will be studied.

STOCK EXCHANGE TOPICS

Tomorrow at noon, the Steel Corporation will make public its monthly report showing unfilled orders on its books as of the end of January. The customary unofficial estimates have been slow in appearing in this instance, but general expectation is that the report will prove moderately favorable. Indisposition to venture a definite guess probably results from realization of the irregular conditions which characterized the steel business during January. Operations at the corporation's plants expanded rather steadily to average about 45 per cent for the period, but on the matter of the volume of new buying little is known. Forward orders were increased by 303,960 tons at the end of December. Invariably January has shown a substantial upturn in unfilled bookings. Last year the gain was 51,518 tons, in 1929 amounted to 132,775 tons, while 1928 brought a rise of 303,073 tons and 1927 a gain of 160,792 tons. The last drop reported for the month was recorded in 1926, totaling 150,625 tons.

The monthly compilation of the stock exchange, listing stocks in their respective groups, presents an interesting picture of the makeup of the trading list. Railroad and equipment stocks had an open market value of $7,910,929,823 at the beginning of this month, holding the position of the largest single grouping. But if the various public utility departments are grouped their combined market value literally dwarfs all others, even the railroads, showing an aggregate market value of $11,472,478,000. Shares of communication companies with a value of $4,145,181,076 form the largest component part of that total. And it is interesting to note stocks of utility holding corporations valued at $3,227,365,114 closely approach the total value of $3,817,348,214 fixed for shares of gas and electric operating companies.

Directors of Paramount-Publix are scheduled to meet after the close of the market today for action on the quarterly dividend due at this time. It is expected the board will vote the regular payment of $1 a share, as usual there being no reason for anticipating any change in the present $4 annual rate in view of the favorable nature of the company's earnings last year. It is estimated that net profit for 1930 ran about 18 per cent ahead of the 1929 peak, leaving a balance available for the average amount of stock outstanding for the period, equivalent to around $6 a share.

Improvement in store operations of United Cigar Stores Company, first noted when business yielded a profit in April, last year, continued through the balance of 1930 and for the entire 12 months, a substantial income was obtained. In 1929, store operations resulted in a loss of $1,424,124. It is understood the report for 1930, to be issued shortly, will show net profit between $1,500,000 and $1,600,000.

Stocks of tobacco companies are among the favorites of bullish interests due to the ability of these manufacturers to maintain their upward trend of earnings during 1930. Another factor recently brought out is that holdings of principal cigaret grades of tobacco in the hands of manufacturers and dealers have advanced substantially through purchase at prices about 15 per cent below a year ago. Consequently, benefits to be derived from lower inventory costs may be expected to add to earnings in the years immediately ahead. Strong cash positions, an undoubted control of the field, and a well sustained demand for cigarets gives the principal factors in this industry many of the attributes desired during a period of uncertainty. American Tobacco, Liggett & Myers, and Reynolds Tobacco are generally regarded as the soundest issues in this group.

John D. Biggers, president of the Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Company, stated that January business has shown a substantial improvement. "The percentage of gain in our sales of plate, window and safety glass has been in excess of the normal seasonal increase," he said, adding, "as a result, operations at both the Toledo and Rossford plants have been increased and we have been able to provide work for 581 additional men since January 1."

CRUCIBLE NET FOR 1930 OFF

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Net earnings of Crucible Steel Company for 1930 were $454,223 less than the annual dividend payments the annual report issued today disclosed. Net profit for the year was $4,045,122, and dividend disbursements during the year totaled $4,499,346.

In 1929, the company had net profit of $8,162,344, equal to $11.66 a share on the common stock. The report to stockholders said earnings for 1930 were reduced somewhat by the policy of the management to keep employed as many of its workers as possible during the year.

STOCK MARKET MAKES BRISK ADVANCE

Trading Proceeds at One Of Liveliest Paces of Year—Bears Retreat

The share list made one of the broadest advances of the new year, and trading set one of the briskest paces experienced since January. A wide assortment of issues sold up 1 to 5 points, with a few mercurial shares making wider gains. While week-end business and trade reports failed to provide a basis for the advance, shorts had evidently been unnerved by the jolt received in Saturday's session.

The bear faction had found its position none too comfortable during most of last week, but the disquieting character of the news from Washington for a time together with a slackening of the recovery in business had encouraged shorts to hang on, despite the sold-out condition of the market. Reports of the past few days indicating a more conciliatory attitude among factions in Washington together with indications that investors are taking a calm and patient attitude toward the vicissitudes of business recovery, finally dislodged the bear forces.

Strength of sterling exchange relieving the pressure against London's gold stock and indications that Paris is taking definite steps toward developing a market for foreign loans were constructive developments in the foreign situation while domestically rains in the Middle West, though still inadequate, have tended to quiet the nervousness over the growing lack of water.

The fact that the market seemed to be governed largely by technical conditions however led to a conservative attitude in banking quarters. Most of the commonly used indices of business activity as corrected for normal seasonal variation show little change from December and it is felt that real improvement in business will be needed to back up any sustained advance in share prices.

The abundance of credit has attracted considerable investment money into dividend paying stocks where current rates are regarded as safe, or current prices already allow for expected reductions. A tabulation shows 116 dividend reductions in January against 847 for the 12 months of 1930, and only 228 for the full year of 1929. Convincing improvement in business, bankers say, would tend to check the tendency toward dividend reductions, by influencing many firms to continue to make payments from surplus until normal earning power is restored.

Forbes

Financial World Advances More Than Business.

By B. C. FORBES

ON A WEEK-END visit to Atlantic City I found that the large hotel where I stopped was turning away patrons. That I learned had not previously occurred this year.

The incident unimportant in itself harmonizes with what has been happening throughout the country and especially in the East.

Mr. Forbes.

IT STILL remains true that except in the financial world actual developments are quite mixed and on the whole only so-so.

Last week did bring very modest improvement in wheat, corn and cotton prices. But weakness was experienced in beef, hides, rubber, silver, lead, butter, eggs, cocoa.

Little incentive for enthusiasm was supplied by the latest railway freight figures, the volume of business passing through banks, building reports, news from the automobile world, oil developments, steel activities.

One basic industry, cotton textiles, was able to record moderate betterment. While retail trade reports were again uneven, it became more noticeable that even limited ordering is immediately reflected by increased activity by manufacturers, proving the theory that stocks of finished goods in the United States are now at rock bottom.

LITTLE CHANGE is noted in employment. Factories here and there are adding to their forces, but no widespread increase in employment can be claimed. However, it is at least something to know that the downswing has apparently been arrested. Moreover, each week brings us nearer the advent of spring, which invariably opens up many avenues of employment. Also, most cities now have their unemployment programs operating fairly satisfactorily.

FINANCIALLY, the week brought further cheerfulness.

Average prices made nominal gains each day, with one exception, on the New York Stock Exchange. It became plain that bear raids were short lived and rather fruitless. Everything indicates that nearly all present holders of stocks are in a position to hold on and that they mean to do so. Public liquidation is unusually meagre. On the other hand, all ascertainable statistics show that the number of stockholders in American enterprises is steadily increasing.

One significant sign of the times is the organization of several "fixed" investment trust companies by highly reputable investment houses. Manifestly, the conclusion reached is the stock prices are now on an exceptionally attractive level. London reports that Scotland's well managed investment trusts have become active on the buying side.

ANNUAL REPORTS are often proving better rather than worse than expected. The widespread belief is that, after a lean first quarter, many companies will begin to show distinct gains in net profits. It is noteworthy that many railroads, for example, although suffering severe shrinkage in gross receipts, have been able to effect such economies as to avert drastic declines in net earnings. It is well known that industrial corporations have likewise been able to make drastic retrenchment in expenses.

AFTER ITS SCARE over the threatened payment of several billion dollars in cash to insured ex-soldiers, the bond market has persistently recovered. Strictly monetary changes suggest that the rise in bonds will continue. Bankers acceptances were twice reduced last week, and are now quoted 1¼-1⅜ per cent. up to 90 days; although call money is officially pegged at 1½ per cent, funds are daily available at 1 per cent; time money is quoted 1½ to 1¾ for short periods and at 2 per cent for longer maturities; commercial paper is down to 2½-2¾ per cent, all phenomenally low quotations.

WASHINGTON has agitated Wall Street. Owen D. Young's suggestion that up to $500,000,000 be provided to meet applications from veterans for relief is regarded by the financial world as a sensible compromise if Congress insists upon taking definite action. The breaking of the threatened deadlock over drought relief is likewise hailed with satisfaction for the reason that it mitigates the danger of an extra session.

The financial and business world would like Congress to do several things, including modification of the antiquated anti-trust laws; but the prevailing feeling is that, in its present temper, Congress probably would do more to hurt than to help confidence were a summer session convened. Hence, final news that no extra session will be called would act as a tonic and might induce business to move off its "dead center."

Thus far discernible betterment has been in sentiment rather than in activity.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The curb market advanced today but as a rule the gains were moderate. Much of the impetus for the rally seemed to be derived from short covering as a result of last Saturday's improvement, although there was some evidence of bullish pool operations.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded in (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

REGIONAL LOAN MEN TO MEET WEDNESDAY

Leading District Finance Men To Speak at Luncheon; Territory Embraces State

A regional meeting and convention of the Pennsylvania Association of Personal Finance Companies will be held Wednesday in William Penn Hotel. Members and delegates from all sections of the state will attend the convention, according to Walter S. Herron of Philadelphia, who will call the meeting to order at 10 a. m.

Dr. MacGowan Pittsburgh Press will speak.

The morning session will be devoted to reports and business of the association. Luncheon will be served at 12.30 p. m., at which time Neil H. Swanson of the Pittsburgh Press will speak.

ARRANGE PAPERS

Following the luncheon papers will be read and discussed. Among them will be a discussion on "Good Will as an Important Factor in Personal Finance," by Walter Dowling, manager of the United Small Loan Corporation of Ambridge, and "How to Manage a Loan Office During a Period of Depression," by C. J. Martin, manager of the Credit Service, Inc., of McKeesport.

A banquet will be held at 6.30 p. m., at which E. F. Moore, supervisor of Beneficial Operating Bureau, New York, will serve as toastmaster. The Rev. Dr. Robert MacGowan, of the Bellefield Presbyterian Church, will speak on "Castles in Spain."

Pennsylvania was one of the first states to enact what is known as the Uniform Small Loan Law, framed by the Russell Sage Foundation on the finding of a commission of economists, sociologists and financiers for the protection of borrowers of small sums from extortionate interest rates.

LAW CUTS RATES

This law not only fixes the interest at a fair rate, but provides a proportional reduction of principal and interest in a series of monthly payments, so that the loan is, as it were, automatically repaid, thus eliminating one of the chief evils of the unregulated loan business, the payment of exhorbitant interest from month to month with no reduction in the principal.

Members of the Association, the leaders say, are rendering a unique service to a deserving class of individuals who lack banking credit. The clientele is mainly composed of members of the American middle class. The only qualification required of their clients, they say, is that they be of good character and established in homes.

Repayment of these small loans is based upon a scientific schedule which enables the customers to pay the amount in small instalments in the shortest time that their income permits, according to officials.

COURT UPHOLDS OIL MERGER

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 9.—In an opinion handed down here the legality of the proposed billion-dollar merger of the Standard Oil Company of New York and Vacuum Oil Company was upheld by three judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals sitting in as a federal district court Saturday.

The decision approving the merger, which was of national importance, was rendered by Judge Kimbrough Stone, presiding judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the eighth judicial district, and was concurred in by Judges Booth and Gardner.

The opinion handed down overruled the government's contention that the merger would violate the famous anti-trust decree of the United States Supreme Court in 1911, which virtually dissolved the Standard Oil "empire," which then included the two corporations now involved.

The merger will create a new company which will be one of the four largest in the country. The capitalization of the Vacuum Company is $128,000,000 and its assets $205,000,000. The Standard Oil Company of New York is capitalized at $434,000,000 and has assets of $708,000,000.

Safe Crackers Fail In 3 Rail Offices

GREENVILLE, Feb. 9.—Amateur safe crackers tried unsuccessfully to rob safes in three railroad offices in this section this morning.

Combination dials on safes in the joint ticket office of the Bessemer and Lake Erie and New York Central roads at Osgood and in the Erie ticket office here were pried off. At Jamestown a high explosive blew a large hole in the safe door.

Maybe the Thieves Heard This Sermon

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 9.—(AP.)—The Rev. A. C. Shuler, pastor of a Jacksonville church, preached a sermon last night on "Thieves and Robbers," then had to walk home.

NEW QUAKE HITS NEW ZEALAND

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Feb. 9.—(INS.)—New earth shocks jarred the Hawke Bay section of North Island today, terrorizing the survivors of Tuesday's disastrous earthquakes and adding further to the property damage in the Napier, Hastings, Wairoa and Gisborne areas.

Further casualties were not reported, but walls and weakened buildings in the several towns crashed down, and at Napier part of a cliff slid off into the sea with a deafening roar.

Estimates on Tuesday's earthquakes indicate that 1,000 were killed, 2,000 injured and 1,600 rendered homeless.

WATCHES SNARE 2 LOITERERS

Unable to explain a number of watches in their possession, police say, when found loitering back of the Nixon Theater early today, J. E. Moore, 26, and Harry Adams, 27, of Akron, O., were held for further investigation by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg.

Hugh Parker, 24, 325 Carson street, was fined $10 or five days on a suspicious person charge, after police say, he demanded entrance to station WCAE early today, saying that he was a radio singer and wanted to make a broadcast. Driving up to Gimbels in company with four other youths, Parker is alleged to have pounded upon the door and demanded the watchman admit him. The others fled at approach of police.

'Gas Attack' Drives Bank Employes Out

BRADFORD, Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Officials and employes of the McKean County Trust Company here were victims of a gas "attack" today. One young woman was burned slightly. All 13 of the tear gas guns with which the bank is equipped were set off accidentally this morning, and everyone in the building was driven out. The tear gas was installed for protection against robbers.

Trapper Hanged For Killing Friend

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Feb. 9.—(AP.)—Peter Knudson, northern trapper, was hanged today for the murder of his companion, Wallace Baird, who was shot and stabbed near Nipawin, Sask.

Now You Know It; Mr. Einstein Is a Poet

PASADENA, Cal., Feb. 9.—(AP.)—"Doc" Einstein's secret vice is out, for brazen headlines all to flout; the famous man is not averse to penning lines of verse, or worse!

Bob Cutter wrote an "Ein-Stein Song" for radios to pass along; broadcasters first made sure to find if "Einie" possibly would mind. Herr doktor scanned the melody then said "Please bring a pen to me."

NEW QUAKE HITS SPAIN RESTORES CIVIL LIBERTIES

MADRID, Feb. 9.—(INS.)—After more than seven years of dictatorship, constitutional guarantees were restored to the people of Spain today.

A brief royal proclamation by King Alfonso restored the freedom of speech and the press and called for parliamentary elections to take place in March. The return to constitutional government was interpreted as a testimony by Alfonso of his complete confidence in Premier Damaso Berenguer.

During the six-year regime of the Primo de Rivera, ex-dictator of Spain, a return to constitutional government was promised frequently, but military and labor unrest throughout his tenure of office prevented him from taking the step. Similar disturbances made it impossible to return to constitutional government during the last year.

A brief royal proclamation by King Alfonso restored the freedom of speech and the press and called for parliamentary elections to take place in March. The return to constitutional government was interpreted as a testimony by Alfonso of his complete confidence in Premier Damaso Berenguer.

WATCHES SNARE CHURCHILL FOR PACT WITH U. S.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 9.—(Universal.)—"Only an Anglo-American understanding will preserve the peace of the world."

This was the declaration of young Randolph Churchill, son of Winston Churchill, British statesman, in a discussion of international politics in Hotel St. Francis. He said:

"I quite agree with William Randolph Hearst that the only way to maintain the peace of the world is for England and America, the two greatest peace-loving nations, to build strong armies and navies. Then the rest of the world will be afraid to attack us.

"The interests of the two countries are the same now, and the only sensible thing is a strong Anglo-American alliance. For these two great powers to try to disarm each other while the rest of the world is arming is preposterous. The London naval pact is the greatest blunder of statecraft since the war."

Maid Says She Did Not Steal Calvert Pearls

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert shares her home and fortune with her half-sister, Kitty, whom she found destitute in New York's underworld. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance. Believing Jim to be a fortune-hunter, Connie, to save Kitty, enlists the aid of Duke Garson, Kitty's friend and underworld intelligence man. He warns Connie that her butler is a crook and that her mother should guard her pearls. Later, Duke is about to declare his love for Connie when Jim appears. He claims he was held up and is afraid to go home. Connie invites him to stay. Duke doubts Jim's story. That night, Mrs. Calvert's pearls are stolen. Duke questions the maid about them. The maid doubts Kitty's honesty. Mrs. Calvert becomes ill after the excitement. Duke accuses Jim of lying about being held up. Jim says he lied because he did not trust Duke and wanted to get back to the Calvert home. Connie tells her mother that she is not sure whether she loves Duke. Duke seeks the butler's aid to solve the robbery mystery. The butler suspects the maid. While out riding with Connie, Duke says she is a new thrill in his life. When he kisses her she is powerless to resist. Late that night Connie is alarmed when she hears a noise in the house. She summons Duke and he discovers the maid hiding in a closet.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LV.

Silence . . . No one, at first, had the power, the desire to speak. Garson's face was a mask. Connie's eyes were black with incredulity. The skin, the features of Mary Smith were deathly pallid, the lips tightly drawn; but for the blazing eyes she was as harshly expressionless as a dried mummy. Her only movement, as she stepped forward, with her hands hanging at her side, was a slight, jerky rise and fall of her chest.

The whole significance was momentarily lost upon Connie.

"Why, Mary—you might have suffocated in there—" she declared in a startled voice. "I don't see how you could breathe!"

Mary Smith seemed to smile, but it was no smile at all. Her teeth showed in a grimace and one clenched hand pressed sharply to her breast.

Maid Is Defiant

"Oh God—that's all she knows!" Her tone was shrill. "All she can say is that I might have suffocated! She doesn't see how I could breathe. You—you idiot—" Her voice sharpened until it cut like a knife. "Can't you understand that I would just as soon not breathe at all?"

"Stop it!" Garson was tersely commanding. A calculating brutality, he conceived, would best control her wildness. "We don't want to hear any of your hysterics or any lies either. Nobody is going to hurt you, but we're going to have the truth from you, young lady!"

"I don't care what you want or do," Mary Smith rasped. "You make me sick—all of you."

She was speaking with an effort from her tightened throat, in jerks, between the rapid heavings of her breast; her eyes were wide and bright, her hands kept going open and shut. The color was coming back to her cheeks and fading again, producing changing, mottled areas of flush on the pallor of the skin.

"A lot it would matter to you" Unless she gained composure rather quickly it was evident to Connie that this highly wrought-up housemaid would cease to be responsible for what she said or did. Her own feelings toward the girl—she was a woman, really—shifted from curiosity to pity, from pity to suspicion, while she had been under excitement, almost forgotten. This suspicion bred in her dislike, a cold aversion in the blood.

"I think you might use a somewhat more respectful tone, Smith," she said. "Inasmuch as we have caught you hiding like a thief—or worse. I think you had better be glad of a chance to make an explanation."

"Yes, you may be quite sure she is going to explain everything—without any argument," Garson affirmed.

"Is that so?" she ejaculated. "Well, I'll tell you both something—you can't bully me. I'm not afraid of either of you. You haven't got a thing on me—not a thing in the world—"

Threatens Family

"I think we have plenty," Garson corrected her. "At least enough to interest the police."

"Nobody has ever been sent to jail yet for hiding in a closet," Mary Smith retorted bitterly. "I may look funny, but it's not a crime. You needn't try to bully me—I'm going up to my room now and tomorrow I'll take my things and get out of the house."

"It's not as simple as that, Mary," Garson remarked steadily. "We'll go downstairs—the three of us—and we're going to talk this over in perfect privacy in the library. No use waking up the whole house. Come on now."

"I won't."

In an instant of commanding firmness Duke Garson caught the girl by the wrist with a pressure so steel-like that any resistance would have been painful; he stood at her side and forced her to march with him downstairs while Connie, her heart swelling, followed them. In the library she preceded them and turned on a single soft shaded light. Garson put Mary Smith into a chair, crossed and closed the door.

"Sit down," he said, methodically as he seated himself in front of her.

"It's not a bit of use," Mary Smith protested. "I haven't done anything wrong and I won't be browbeat."

"You tell us the truth," Garson shot at her coldly. "It was you, I suppose, that stole Mrs. Calvert's necklace. At least, there won't be any trouble in convincing a jury. You realize, I suppose, that you're face to face with a term in the penitentiary?"

"If you have me arrested," the girl said, venomously, "you'll be sorry. Don't think I'll go to jail alone."

"You needn't go to jail at all if you behave yourself and tell the truth," Connie told her. "The only thing is—we must have the pearls back."

"I don't know anything about your pearls," she snarled. "If you try to have me arrested, I'll fix this stylish family of yours. Oh, I'll throw plenty of mud if I have to. I'll drag others in—that Kitty!"

DAILY TRUE STORY — 'Assistance'

J. Hamilton Sturgis was well aware that he had fallen in love with Arlita Barton.

He had known this interesting, yet amazing and disconcerting state of his emotions for fully six months.

There was no indication that Arlita even suspected this.

J. Hamilton Sturgis had risen rapidly since he left college and went in with the Ajax Advertising Company. In six years he not only held a junior partnership but was general advisor of special advertising campaigns.

Sturgis was, without question, a genius in his line. When he mapped a campaign for some concern that spent a few millions annually in advertising, through his agency, the campaign was novel and, far more important, uniformally successful.

But when it came to what he called "petty details" he was lacking.

Arlita used to discuss Mr. Sturgis with her older sister, who was secretary to the president and married to one of the advertising artists. Arlita made her home with them.

"Came in late in his plus fours, dictated three letters, spent three hours out for luncheon and talked fly fishing with Gibbs of the sports goods concern the rest of the time," her sister Anna would say, or often something quite like that, always finishing with:

"And how was Napoleon today?"

Arlita gave no sign that this offended her. She knew that because Mr. Sturgis was general advisor in advertising campaigns, they had called him "Napoleon," but always behind his back.

"Mr. Sturgis had the head of the Jargon concern in today," Arlita would answer with pride, "and he accepted all of our plans for the advertising."

"Our?"

Praises Employer

One evening, shortly after the time that J. Hamilton Sturgis discovered his love for Arlita and admitted to himself that he would never have courage to tell her about it, Anna was puzzled to hear Arlita refer to him as "Quotes."

"Did you call him 'Quotes'?"

"It slipped out—but I think of him as 'Quotes' a lot because he is great on using maxims, epigrams and proverbs and still he can never remember them."

Her sister laughed.

"He's too clever. He waves his hand and generally says that it doesn't matter—says it was a trifling detail."

"And so you strike it out?"

"As bad as that?"

"Anna! Don't be ridiculous. Mr. Sturgis never so much as put his hand on me. He's a gentleman."

"Oh—I didn't know but what you were getting ideas. I thought, perhaps you might have fallen in love with him!"

"Now, isn't that a crazy idea!" Arlita exclaimed. But her cheeks felt hot and she wondered if she were really blushing.

"A great many nice girls have crazy ideas like that. How do you help Napoleon Quotes out?"

"Oh, well, for example, this afternoon he was dictating a statement and, as he always does now, he said 'Quote . . . Fortune knocks—er—fortune knocks—never mind, cut that out.' So I just said 'once at every man's door.' Well, he almost smiled. I had been helping this way now and then."

"But what did he say?"

"Arlita, you are crazy like a fox, aren't you—making yourself indispensable to him. Bet you get a big raise in salary soon."

Sturgis Worried

She had been helping him in this way more than she had admitted to her sister. She had secured various volumes on ancient proverbs, axioms, epigrams and the like and fortified herself in this manner.

The first time Arlita had helped Sturgis in this manner he had thought nothing of it, but after a few days he began to marvel.

And it worried him. He feared she would think him terribly ignorant of many things, and at this time he greatly desired her to think him about perfect.

And so it went, day after day.

In the spring Arlita took some jonquils from home to put on her desk. She got there early and decided that she would put a few in a vase on Mr. Sturgis' desk.

He smiled when he came in and saw them.

"My, my—from you?" he asked. She was arranging his mail at the time.

"They are cheerful, aren't they," she said, without admitting that she brought them.

J. Hamilton Sturgis stood there slowly removing his gloves and looking down at Arlita Barton.

When the morning sun glinted on her blonde hair it made it gleam almost as brightly as the jonquils. He noticed that and a thought came to him.

Why the devil couldn't he have told her what he wanted to say—that the jonquils were like her beautiful hair?

It was a long and busy day.

He was getting out his speech to the company's working staff for their annual dinner. It was supposed to be the start of a speech that would fire them with loyalty and ambition and make them all go-getters and able-doers.

"—and most apt to each of us in this organization is that axiom—quote—'He that by the plow—by the plow—'"

Sturgis in pantomime seemed to be holding a plow, but he could get no further.

Sturgis stared at her in admiration.

"You are amazing—I wish I had your abilities, Miss Barton," he said.

He was really wishing that he had her heart and hand.

He sat at his desk a long while, planning. He finally decided that he would write a little note to her, explaining his love for her and hoping that she might entertain some regard for him. He wrote:

Dear Miss Barton: I find it difficult to express in spoken words my great admiration and love for you. The fact is that I seem to be timid, yet I know that faint heart—"

Mr. Osgood, head of the company, came in as Sturgis was tapping his chin with his pen and trying to recall just how it went.

"Babson's just come, wants us to dine with him, Sturgis, and you're just the man to talk him into doubling his advertising appropriation this year," he said.

Arlita Finds Note

Arlita, coming in for final instructions, saw that his hat and coat were gone. She began to straighten his desk and found the letter, and, reading it about 50 or more times, with eyes shining, she added, with the first pencil she picked up, a red one:

"—never won fair lady."

Sturgis read it the next morning and began to hum a tune. Arlita came in when he sounded the buzzer.

"Good morning, Mr. Sturgis," she said, calmly enough.

"Good morning. I'm feeling better than ever. Had heart trouble, faint heart, you know, but am entirely over that, thanks to your assistance!"

And from the way he held her, and kissed her, Arlita knew that he spoke the truth.

"Police Chief Bartels has found a means of entertaining the youngsters who visit Shorewood's jail. BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

Mentally Deficient

Judge Gibson Questions Sanity of Those Who Play the Numbers Racket.

When a Pittsburgh bank teller, up before Judge R. M. Gibson in the United States District Court for embezzlement, confessed he had stolen the bank's money to play the numbers racket, the judge remarked that the proper course would be to commit him to an institution for the mentally deficient.

Certainly the good sense of anyone who gambles with the chances so overwhelmingly against him as they are in the numbers lottery is open to question.

Since many of our weak-minded youths are unable to resist the lure of these games, it devolves upon the police to protect them by smashing the rackets.

The persistence of the authorities in Canton and Alliance, O., in smashing slot machines has just brought an admission of surrender from the company manufacturing and installing them.

An Appreciated Rain

Week-End Precipitation Arouses Gratitude in Quarters Previously Thoughtless on the Subject.

It is probably no exaggeration to say that the rain which fell over the week-end was welcomed with greater gratitude by many people in the Pittsburgh district than any other shower in their experience. The reason for their appreciation lay, of course, in the fact that in common with many other sections of the country we have been going through a drought of unprecedented severity.

Residents of the cities and boroughs who receive their water supply from the rivers have had little occasion to worry, but there are many people in Allegheny County who have to depend on wells, and in the number are some of our richest citizens as well as our poorest.

Among those who have been most inconvenienced by the drought are families living in palatial houses on Sewickley Heights and Coraopolis Heights. With dozens of bathrooms in their homes some of the occupants of these mansions have been compelled by the shortage of water during the last couple of weeks to go to hotels for baths.

There will be greater sympathy here hereafter with the tribulations of the inhabitants of the Sahara and Death Valley.

Improved Sanitation

Gratifying Progress Is Made in Protecting City from Disease.

The satisfaction expressed by the Pittsburgh Housing Association in the report issued by the Bureau of Sanitation will be shared generally.

The increase during the same period of 4,513 in the number of garbage receptacles in Pittsburgh is no less noteworthy, since it means that less garbage is thrown into back alleys and vacant lots in the slum districts.

The bureau's report is the first published in a number of years. It is to be hoped the public will be told annually hereafter what is being done to improve sanitation.

A Great Strain

Disaster May Result If National Debt Continues to Be Reduced at Killing Pace.

The gross debt of the United States on August 31, 1919, was $26,596,701,648. At the end of the fiscal year of 1930 it was $16,185,308,299. The reduction within a period of a little more than 10 years was over $10,400,000,000.

Is it necessary that this killing pace should be maintained?

Mr. Melvin A. Traylor, the president of the great First National Bank of Chicago, in an interesting address delivered recently, voiced the opinion which is widely shared throughout the country, that the rapid amortization or payment of the war debt is without any DIRECT benefit to the country; and under the present conditions of depression and trade difficulty, it RETARDS business recovery, and IMPOSES AN UNNECESSARY BURDEN UPON A SORELY TAXED AND STRUGGLING PEOPLE.

"I have never believed," said Mr. Traylor, "that the theory was sound that this generation should pay the entire burden of our participation in the war.

"There is much to be said in favor of the argument that while we are prosperous we should pay heavily. But it seems to me now, when we are no longer in that state, we should provide for a slower amortization of our debt, with a consequent lifting of the burden of taxation. In my opinion, this alone will contribute more to a restoration of business activity and cheerful confidence than any other single step which could be taken."

He maintained that the obligations of the government were a substitute for money, and that their existence would promote, instead of discourage, the great interests of industry.

Of course, the ability to meet the interest upon the public debt and to refund the principal, as it matures, lies at the foundation of the nation's credit. But the maintenance of the national credit does NOT demand a hot-foot reduction in the principal of the debt, when the result is a tax-enfeebled business structure, with curtailed activities and diminished energy and initiative.

Such results tend directly to the impairment of the nation's credit and more than offset the doubtful benefits of a forced and punishing reduction in the principal of the public debt.

Is it possible that Mr. Mellon is attempting to achieve the spectacular in extinguishing the national debt with a rapidity that takes one's breath away?

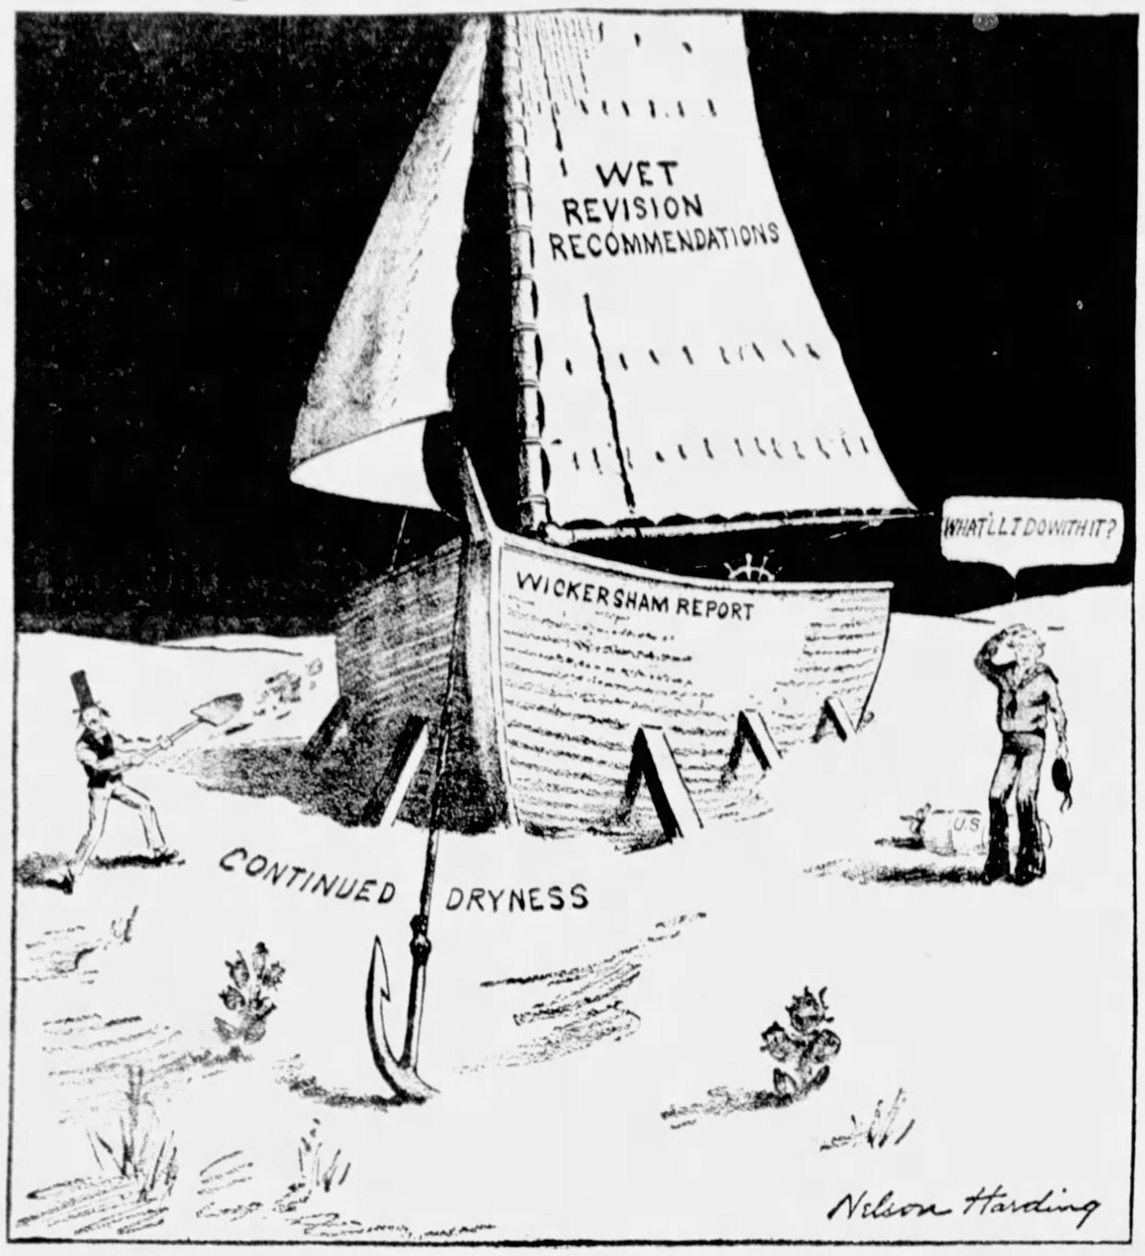
Is it possible that the rising demand for the relief of distress among our war veterans is to be discouraged by a self-imposed embarrassment of the Treasury, due to a ruinous and feverish pressure for the paying off of the public debt?

The reduction of the national debt is a good thing, provided it is done temperately and with intelligent moderation, and without straining unduly the commercial stability of the country.

Pursued, however, too zealously and with disregard of its indirect havoc, it may become not only a mistake of policy, but a NATIONAL DISASTER.

'The Ship of the Desert'

By Nelson Harding



The Wickership is a dry land ship,
Although it's built for an ocean trip.
It was launched in the arid desert sand

With anchor down and the sails all set,
While the sailor thinks he never saw

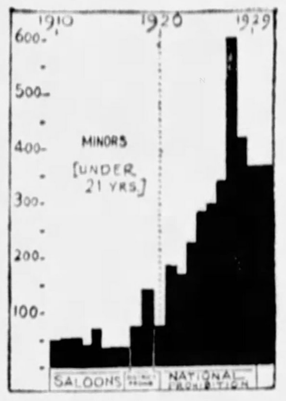
A Small Diagram

Speaking Volumes.

The little diagram shown here was NOT prepared by the Wickersham Committee to accompany its famous report.

Neither was it drawn to illustrate the well-known pre-prohibition song, "How Dry I Am."



It comes from the Moderation League, Inc., an organization opposed to liquor but in favor of temperance. Among the League's members, by the way, are Newcomb Carleton, president of the Western Union; Harrington Emerson, the efficiency engineer; Rt. Rev. Charles Fiske, Bishop of Central New York; Prof. Michael Pupin, of Columbia; Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation, and other substantial citizens.

It is an interesting diagram, and so clear that any comment on it is superfluous.

Let us therefore merely point out that arrests of minors for drunkenness in the nation's capital increased EIGHT TIMES over the days when saloons were open, but sold liquor to adults only.

Nobody wants the saloon back, but even the saloon had its good points compared with the speakeasy—which sells to men, women and children, and, as you observe, sells PLENTY.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Awake betimes and with my wife to a counting house to clip the coupon off our bond. And on the way met up with the fascinating Margaret Porter and her new husband, Capt. Hopkins. Saw also the brooding poet Edwin Arlington Robinson.

Home and find an autographed copy of "Back Street" from Fannie Hurst, which I read in serial and brings out the colorful scenes of the Cincinnati of my day vividly. Then at my chore, laboring with ardor until the city lit up for the night.

In the evening to a play so smutty the face of a girl on my left was aflame. So driving through the park and to Frank Case's to a party to which came Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Joan Crawford, Gilbert Miller, Anita Loos, Hendrick Willem Van Loon, Clifton Webb and others. To bed late.

Outfitting dogs becomes one of the phenomenal industries. A few years ago only larger department stores kept collars, harness and blankets for dogs. Now all department stores have dog departments, and there are a score of special dog shops. In these one finds everything from rubber overshoes to motor goggles. Blankets are made to order, some trimmed with touches of ermine at $150 a blanket. There are dog kits in pin seal cases containing everything a dog needs on a journey from silver comb to unsinkable rubber balls. These traveling outfits range from $50 to $125. And if you feel resentment over such Louis XIV extravagances, blame the owner, not the dog. The dog is happier playing with an old shoe or gnawing on a 10-day-buried bone.

Matrimonial Recipes

Women no longer exchange recipes for wine jelly, angel-food and popovers across the back fence. In fact, even back-fence gossip is relegated to the maids and cooks, in these busy days of golf, bridge and "go-go."

* * *

But, modern wives manage to exchange a lot of little domestic hints over their card tables, ash-trays and jeweled cigaret holders.

* * *

* * *

How to draw an admission, a confession or a complaint out of a husband without using a vacuum-cleaner.

* * *

How to know when your marriage is going to jell—or why it refuses to "set."

* * *

Whether to season the domestic relations with reticence or frankness or with equal quantities of each.

* * *

* * *

When to add a pinch of sugar to all you say to a man—and when to take a grain of salt with what he says to you.

* * *

How to warm over love after it has cooled—and how to revive stale kisses and make them seem fresh and tempting.

How to keep the "love-moths" away from a good-looking husband, while you are away in Florida; and how to get the kinks out of his habits when you return.

* * *

How to vary the daily menu of housework, amusement and sentiment, so as to keep a man's interest piqued and his enthusiasm from sagging.

* * *

* * *

How to "preserve" youth charm and romance; and keep the color and flavor of the honeymoon.

* * *

* * *

Little do their innocent, unsuspecting husbands know how much time women spend in collecting those matrimonial recipes, and experimenting on their tired spouses, when the latter come home all fagged out, after a hard day's golf.

Dual Character of Electrons

By Archibald Henderson

The findings of science within recent years have been so complicated and often mutually contradictory that they have inevitably led to a discussion as to the limitations of human thought. Is it perhaps possible that our knowledge of nature will always remain partial and imperfect? Are certain things comprehensible, and other things incomprehensible? Do certain problems transcend the powers of the human mind and imagination? Is it not proable that as science widens and deepens, humanity will be compelled to attain new powers of comprehension and receptivity?

One of these singular impasses, occasionally encountered in the history of science, is puzzling the physicists of today. There has been discovered a puzzling duality of apparently irreconcilable wave and corpuscular properties which characterizes electrons. To the layman, it is incomprehensible that a scientist could bring himself to look upon electrons as corpuscles and also as waves. What is the ground for this singular and puzzling phenomenon, which is apparently full of mutual contradictions?

Go back some 30 years ago, and we were confronted with many new and beautiful phenomena observed in highly exhausted electrical discharge tubes.

Beams of radiation from the cathodes of various tubes—Geissler, Crookes, Roentgen ray, and other tubes—are deflected in electric and magnetic fields; and it was shown by J. J. Thomson and by Weichert that this radiation deflection takes place just as if the radiation were a stream of swiftly moving, negatively charged particles. This, and other discoveries pointing in the same direction, indicated the existence of an ultimate unit of electric charge, to which was given the name "electron."

Many experiments, of both a direct and indirect character, confirmed the view that electrons were a universal constituent of matter. As Davisson says, they could be vaporized from matter by heating; they streamed forth under the solicitation of light and X-rays; they were ejected spontaneously by radio-active materials. Measurements were made of their charge, most precisely in the famous oil drop experiments of Milliken. The mass of the electron was determined with great accuracy. An ocular demonstration of the corpuscular nature of electrons was arrived at by C. T. R. Wilson, who actually photographed the tracks pursued by individual electrons in traversing a gas. Electrons were also shown to be discrete particles of electricity by observing the fluctuations in the current flowing from a heated filament. In character and magnitude they agree with the random emission of charges of the known magnitude of electrons.

Every conceivable experiment seemed to point conclusively to the conception that electronic radiations were of a corpuscular nature. This gave rise to an elaborate theory of the optical and electrical properties of matter. The famous Bohr theory of the atom rests squarely upon this same assumption.

Finally a new set of discoveries gave rise to a different conception of radiation. Light had been observed to have both corpuscular and undulant characteristics.

The quantum theory gave rise to a curious correlation of frequency and energy. Moreover, the theory of relativity gave rise to a certain correlation of mass and energy. The French scientist, Louis de Broglie, came to the conclusion that the conception of the electron as a particle might in certain circumstances be found inadequate.

This new notion has already proved extremely fruitful. For the present the planetary system of electrons conceived by Bohr has been displaced by the new system of de Broglie. The French scientist replaces Bohr's system by a medium continuous, though inhomogeneous, capable of natural vibrations.

A considerable number of successful experiments have been made confirming de Broglie's conception. For example, it has been demonstrated that electrons are regularly or "specularly" reflected from the surface of a crystal. Most of the stream of electrons follow the mirror law; the angle of incidence is equal to the angle of reflection. There is a strong and well-defined beam of regularly reflected electrons. Regular reflection is explained with complete satisfactoriness by regarding the incident beam, not as a stream of particles, but as a beam of waves.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Maybe I'm wrong. You can judge for yourself. Here's the situation—

I wrote an article about something that happened while I waited in a garage. A careless youngster, kicking aside a fine wrench that lay in his way, in his hurry to get off at the 5 o'clock whistle . . .

"Then they wonder why don't they get a raise," said the boss, picking it up.

"What's a wrench to them. They didn't buy it. They didn't drop it there. They aren't paid to pick that particular wrench up. Then why should they bother to put it in the tool room? That's the way they reason.

"Unusually careless? No. He's just an average youngster. Nine out of 10 kids—American kids—are like that. Old country youngsters—they're different. They're trained to take an interest. They're drilled in their jobs as soldiers are drilled in any army. They get so they take their work seriously—nothing's too small to be important. But you can't get the average American boy to see things that way. He acts as if he was doing you a favor by working at all—"

That's what a boss actually said—an American boss of American boys, I asked—IS IT TRUE?

"HOW CAN AN AMERICAN EDITOR OF AN AMERICAN PAPER EMPLOY AN AMERICAN COLUMNIST TO COMPARE AN AMERICAN WORKMAN WITH HIS FOREIGN BROTHER, TO THE ADVANTAGE OF THE PARTY OF THE SECOND PART?"

So here's where I want YOUR opinion.

Should — or shouldn't — an American workman be compared with a foreign-born workman? And should — or shouldn't — the American be blamed if his performance falls down in that comparison?

I am an American working woman. I do not, however, hold my job because I am an American. I hold that job because I make a success of it. If I shirked, grew lazy, stupid, careless of my American employer's interests, and thereby of my own interests, should I not be criticized? And if a woman writer of foreign birth gave proof that she could do my job better, that she was more skillful and conscientious, should she not be given my job in my place?

America is a clever, powerful country. But a citizen does not automatically inherit that cleverness or power, merely by being born in New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Denver or San Francisco.

I love America! I would rather be an American citizen than the citizen of any other country. But I know the truth about America. I know that America is—WHAT WE MAKE IT. Not what our fathers made it—but what we make it TODAY, by our individual aspirations and efforts.

America was great, once. But that greatness will last only as long as the performance which sustained it lasts. You and I can't cash in on George Washington's record, or Abraham Lincoln's. We must make a record for ourselves.

America faces a menace. That menace is not Communism nor Bolshevism nor anything of foreign import. It is the danger of our own, home-made laziness. Can Americans be criticized? Can they be compared with foreign-born workmen, unfavorably if need be? Heaven HELP THEM IF THEY CAN'T—say I. What do YOU SAY?

Wise Words

Trust him little who praises all, him less who censures all, and him least who is indifferent about all.—Lavater.

A man should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong, which is but saying, in other words, that he is wiser today than he was yesterday.—Pope.

There is some help for all the defects of fortune, for if a man cannot attain to the length of his wishes, he may have his remedy by cutting of them shorter.—Cowley.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Mother Sea

If I were crushed and stricken utterly,
With mighty sorrow burdening my breast,
I should leave home and friends to seek the sea;

For once the world was but a watery waste
Wave pressing wave in haste.

Of swarming life the sea was mother then,
And when land's thrusting peaks came forth at last
Her teeming myriads climbed to marsh and fen
From out the restless vast.

All life . . . it may be . . . turns in need to her
When tides of hope are ebbing, faint and low,

If I were torn and care-wracked utterly,
By grief that would not lessen, would not cease,
I should leave all old loves to seek the sea;
The sea could give me peace.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

All your life you have wanted to do something fine for a certain person, but being reserved you are afraid to make your desires known.

Affectionate in disposition, fearful of being misunderstood, you are dumb in the presence of those whom you like best.

Recently you had the experience of seeing another trying to accomplish a certain thing which you knew he was not going at in a way to succeed.

If he had asked your aid you might have helped materially and gladly.

But you saw his efforts go to naught because you were afraid to approach him intimately enough to give advice or render service.

As a child you saw a person drop an article and were too shy to call out to a stranger that she had lost something so you kept the article.

Thereafter you felt yourself a thief because you were morbidly shy about taking the first step or making the first move to call the attention of a stranger.

But the truth is that if you want to help others sincerely enough you can forget yourself in your desire to do good and that's the secret of a kind heart.

When self comes first in your thought, your spirit lacks something.
